WHITMER HIGH SCHOOL
TOLEDO, OHIO
VOLUME XXXIX

Push buttons, computers and automation have begun to step on the toes of the individual. The current upheaval of tradition is a good example of one's wanting to be something other than what today's computerized society demands. People, especially students, want to be able to be recognized for their individual merits.

Encouragement for individuality on the part of students is a major role of the Whitmer program. Pride is our key word. Being proud of one's work stimulates the desire to go on. A student should be able to learn and explore in his own way, and pride himself on his accomplishments. If this be so, let him come here and be proud to be a part of Whitmer. Let him be proud to be himself.

Has the computer made the individual just a face in the crowd? We at Whitmer like to believe one tends to become the face in the crowd. Over 4,000 students attend the Whitmer complex and not one is a number in a machine, but all are individuals.

Observation is an important part of a lab experiment for physics.

Marsha Okorowski and Karen Ford encourage the spectators to cheer for a victory.

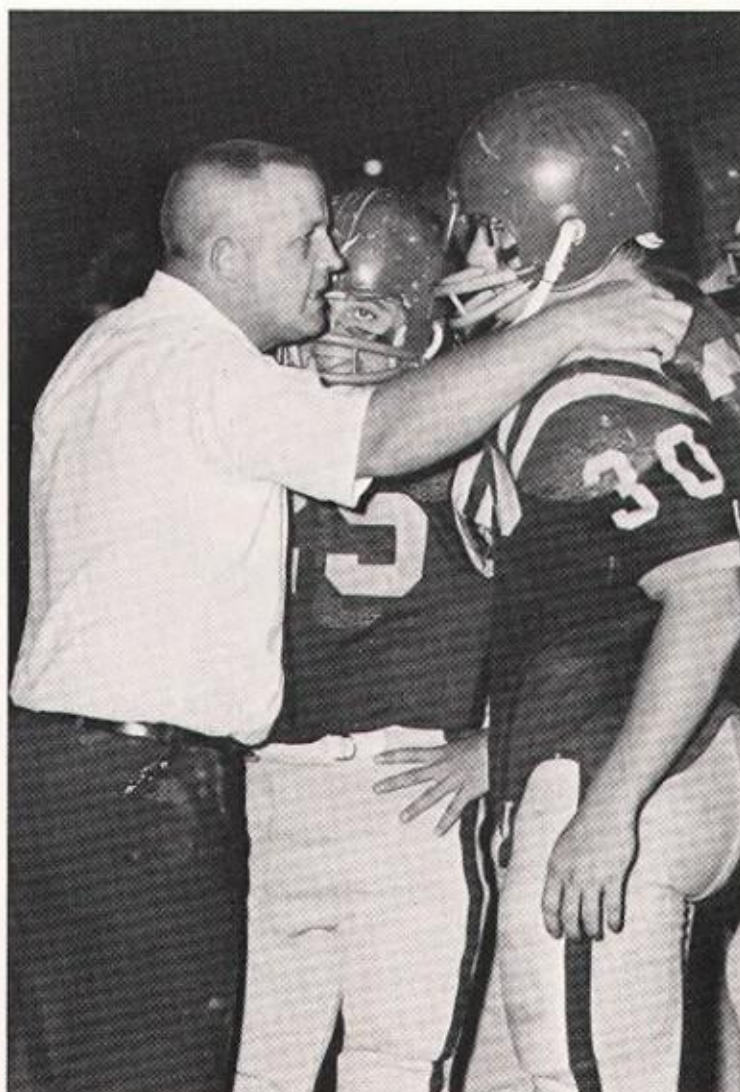

Andrea McCormick displays proper form as she climbs the rope.

Standing at attention, Sue Gibson waits for the next routine.

All phases of school life lend themselves to helping a person become more than a six digit number on a card with holes in it. In all aspects of school activities every sportsman, actor, musician, debater, leader, and worker is an artist in his own right. Each has had to put a certain amount of determination, time, sweat, and energy—a certain amount of himself—to get where he is and where he wants to go. No matter how we work as a team, assemble as a group, or are said to be a unit, each and every Whitmer High School student is an individual. Each is a uniquely separate, copyrighted personality unable to be dittoed off in a machine and unwilling to become a statistic in anyone's book.

Coach Decker shows determination as he discusses a play with Leist and Krohn.

The 1968 musical starts with the troupe singing "We Open in Venice."

A Columbus Day theme inspires the idea of a boat formation for the 1968 Homecoming.

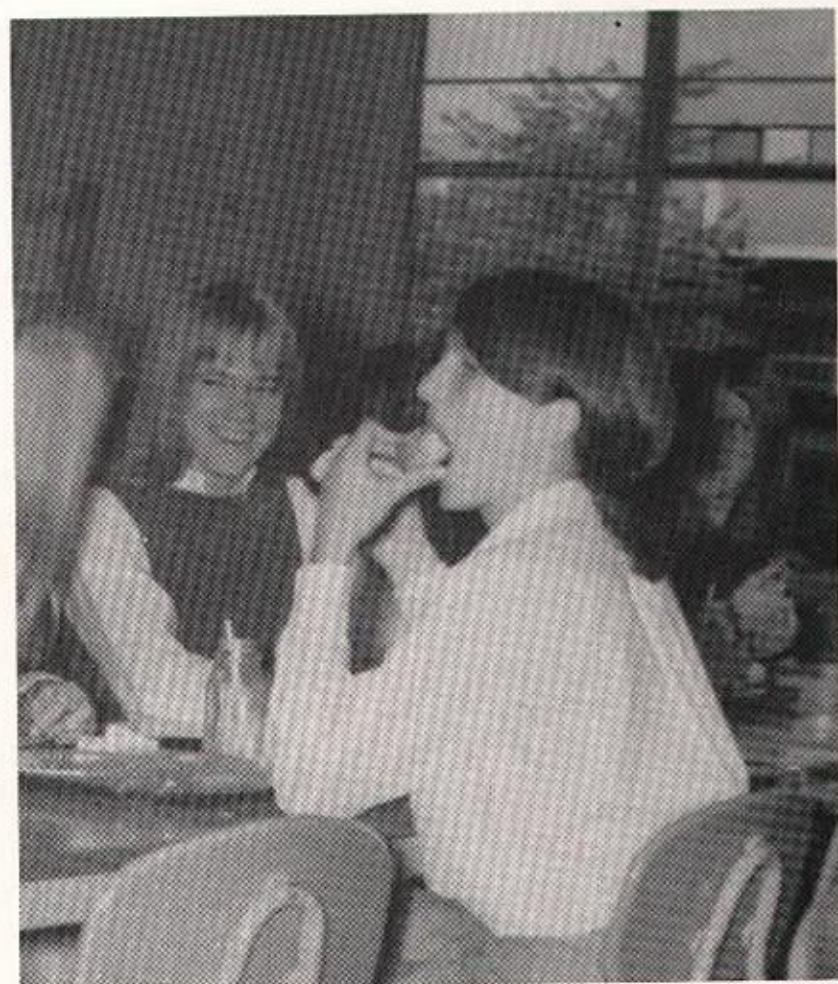

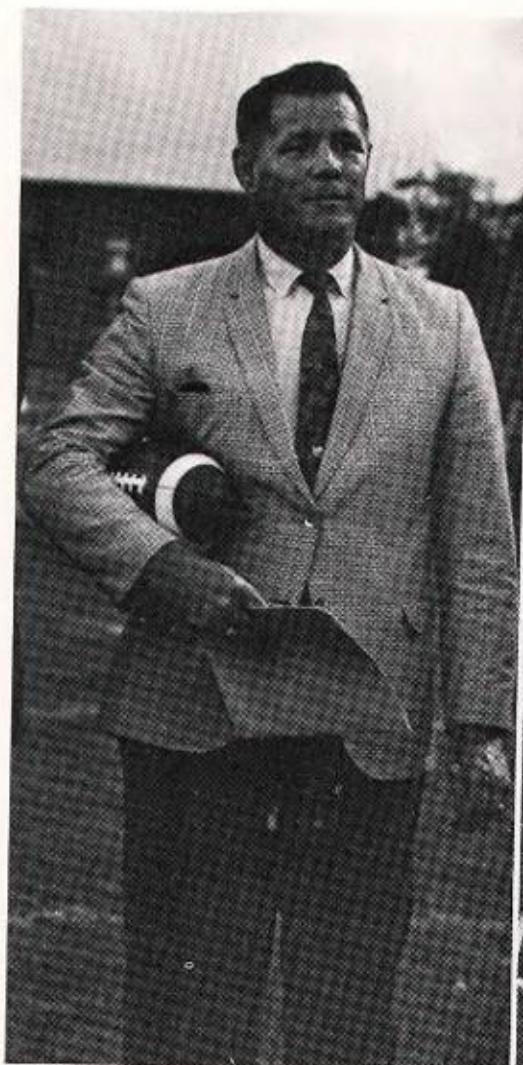

Foreign students and their American hosts laugh together on the front lawn. They are Anne Bordier, France, Greg Nickloy and Mary Scofield, Whitmer, Richard Blow, England, and Nabuko Ishida, Japan.

Jones admires . . .

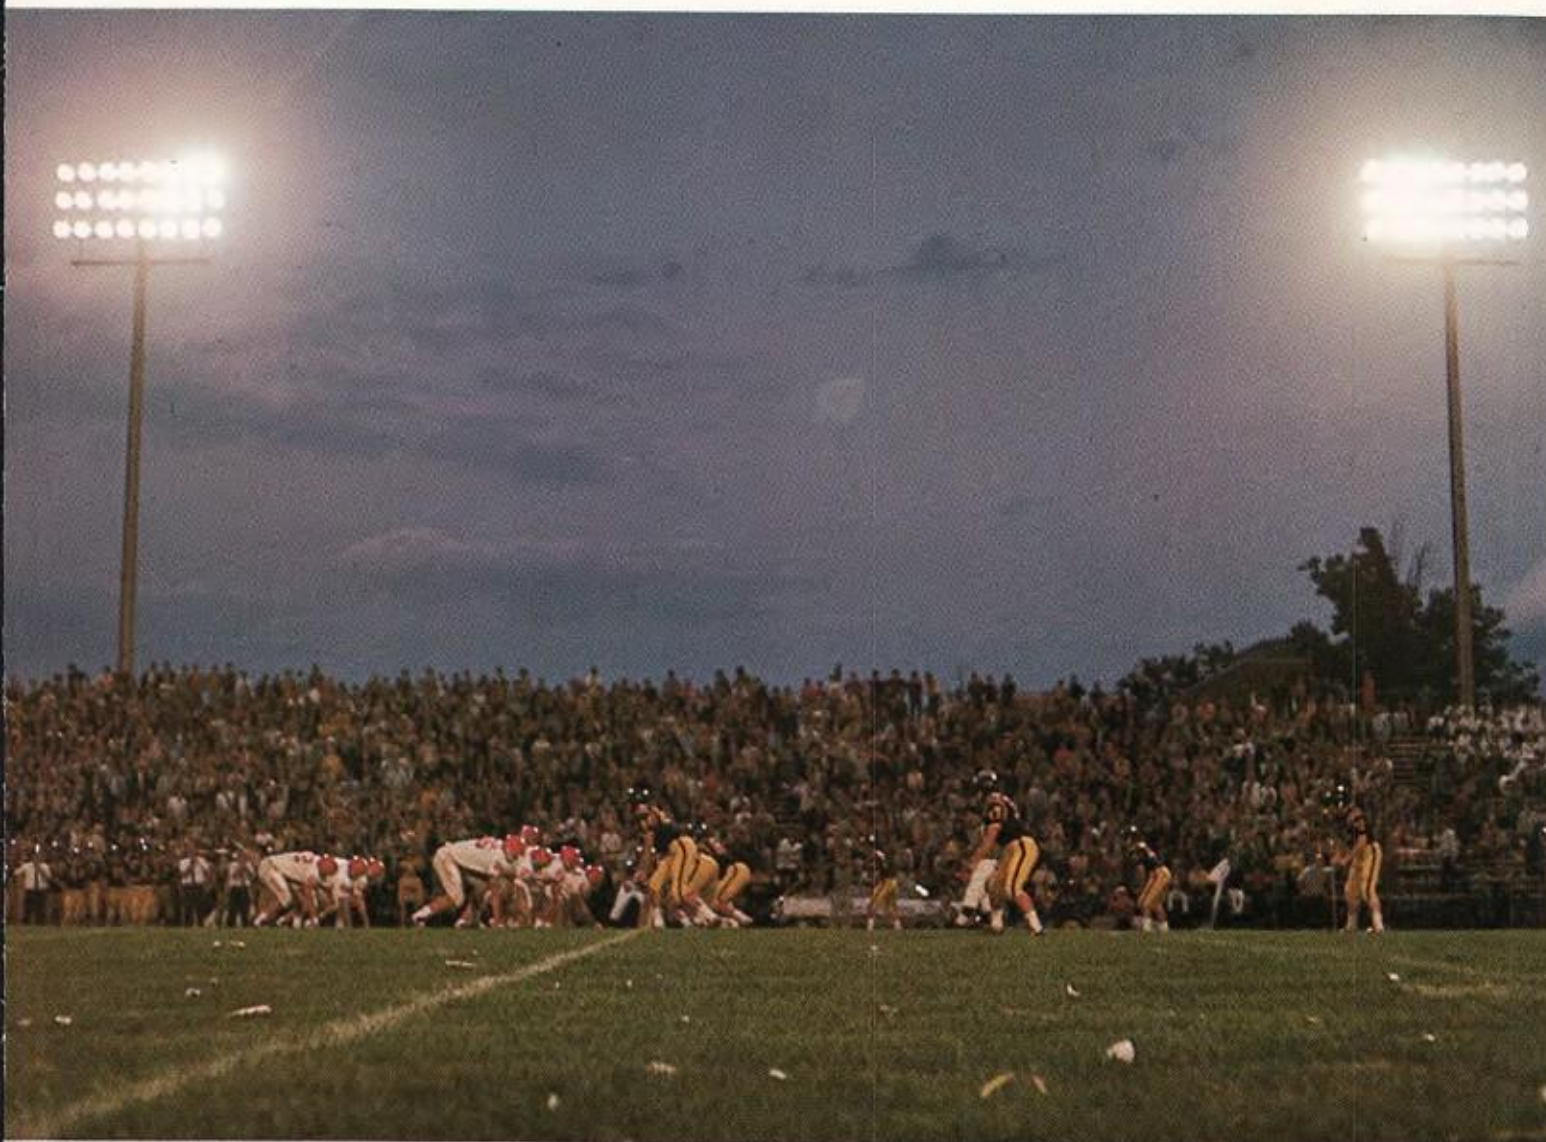

Nightingale praises . . .

Rhodes dedicates . . .

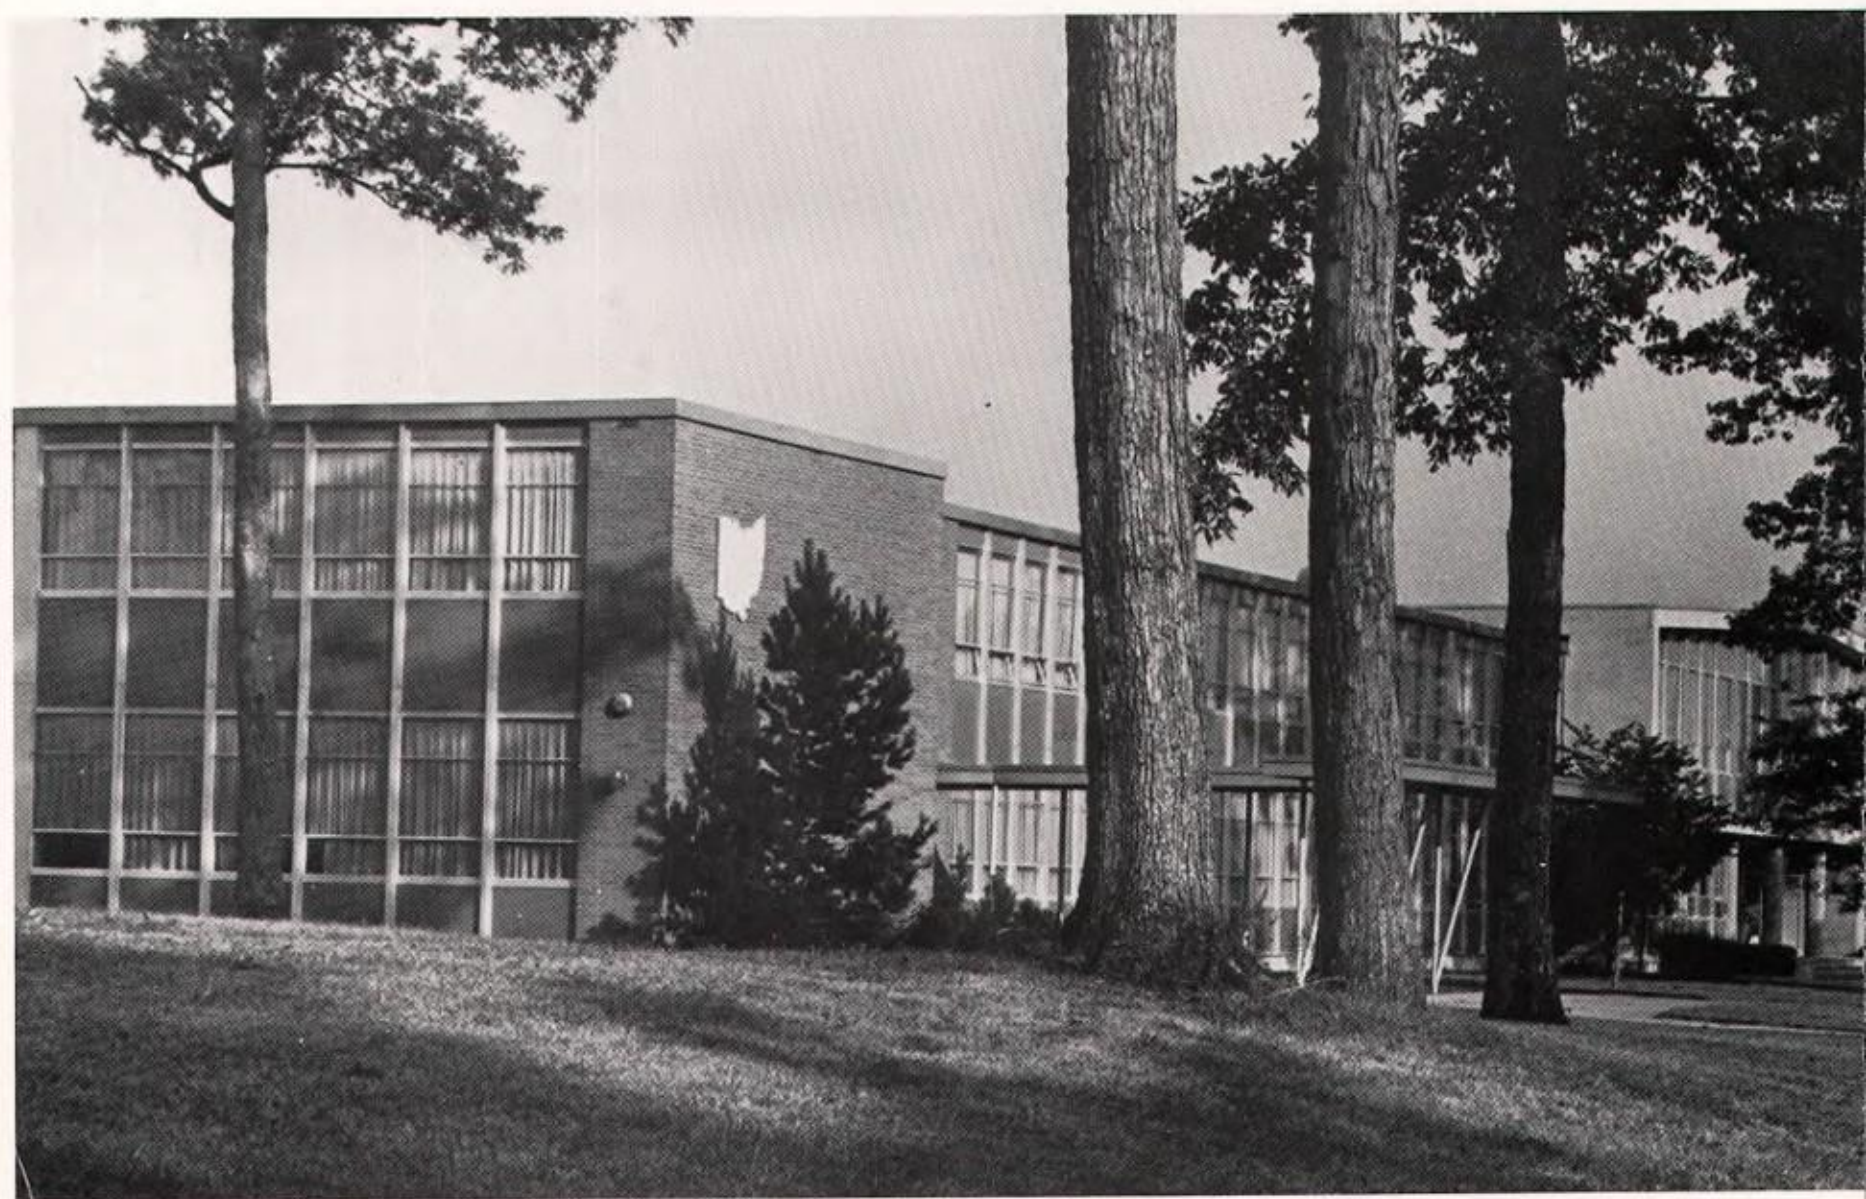

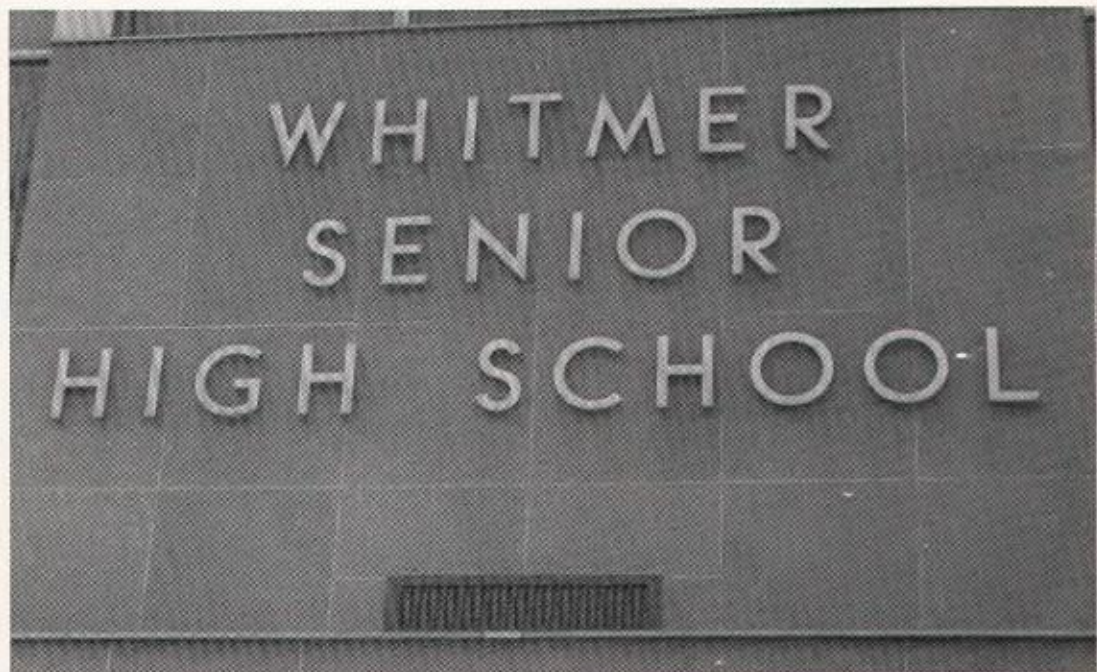

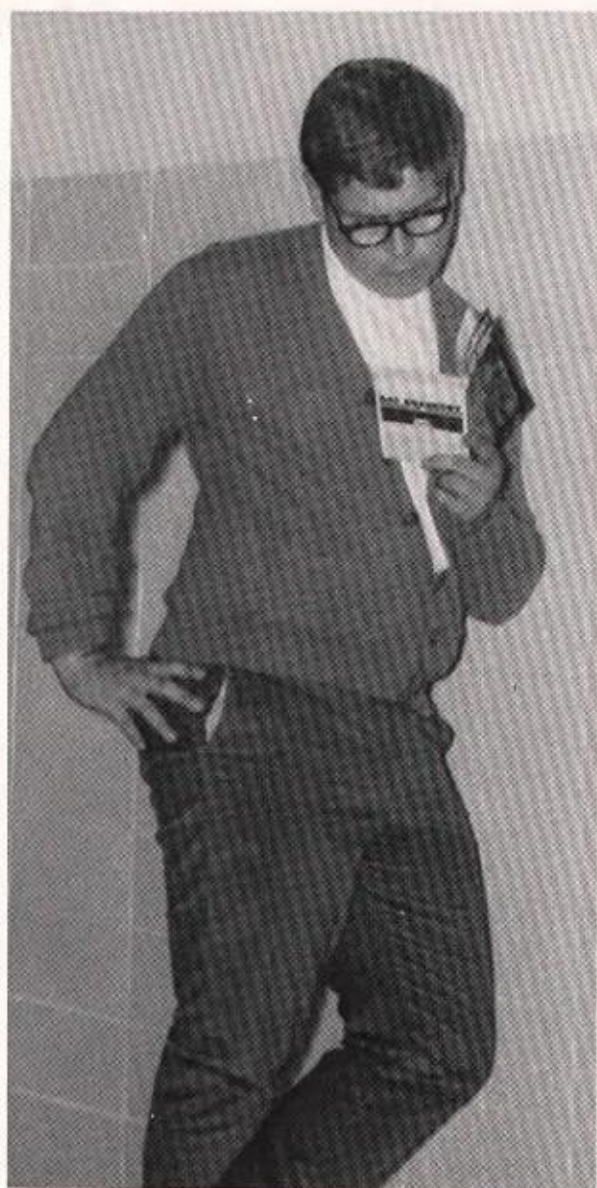

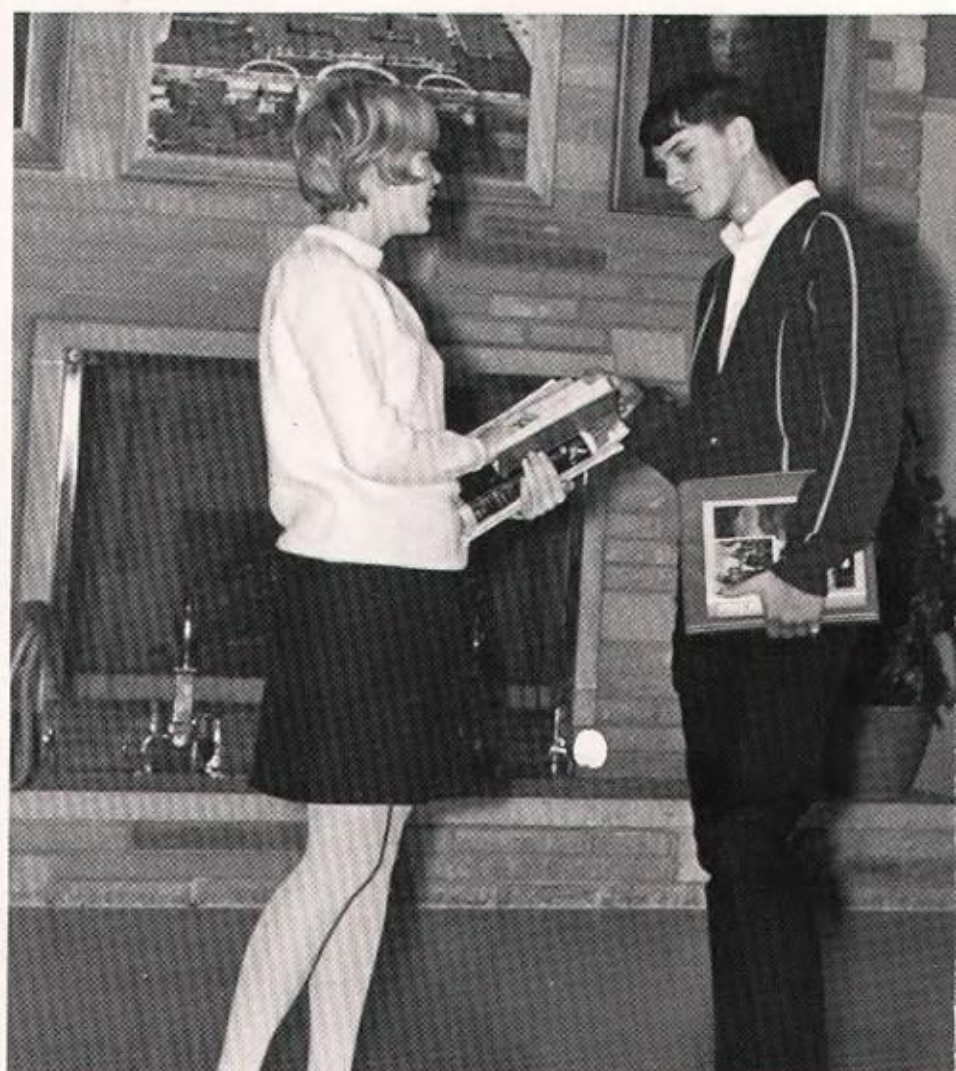

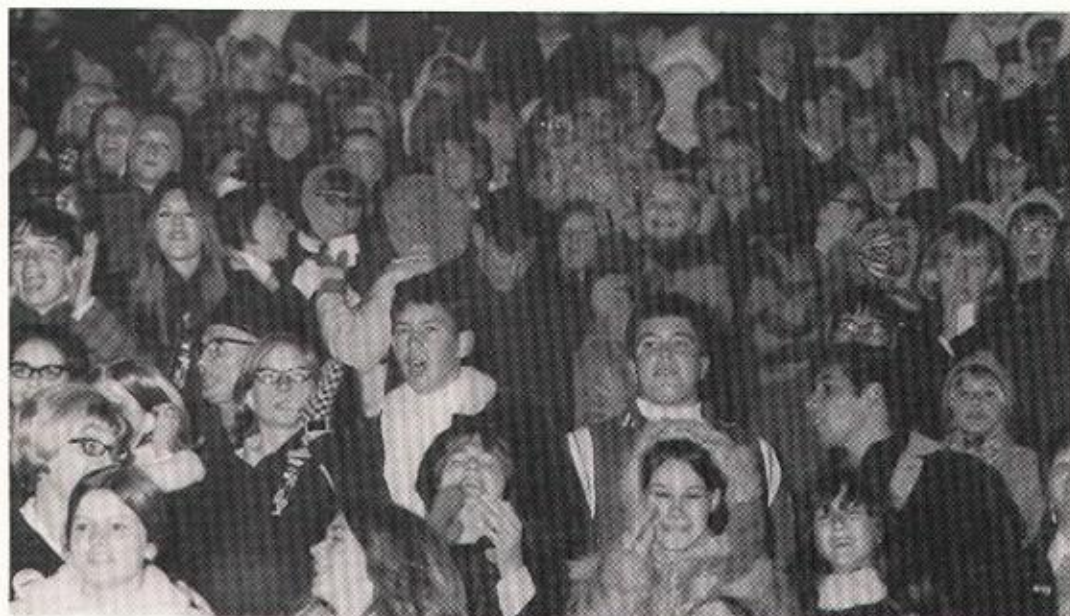

Katie Beck enthusiastically cheers during an outdoor pep session.

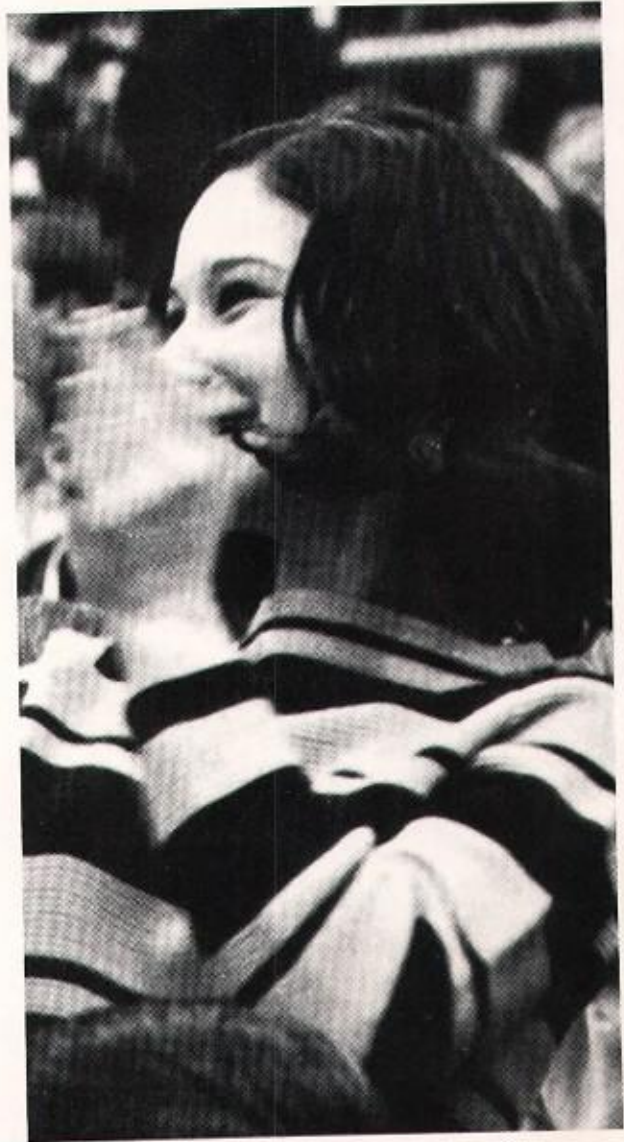

In a world such as ours, pulling together is very important in order to meet the demands of success. But in this same society, singleness is also needed for this ideal. To have success as a collective enterprise means to have success as one person. There must be that personal factor involved to attain the high standards of all the Whitmer activities, productions and organizations. To have these high standards takes individual talents and abilities. This cannot be accomplished by machines. We must realize that, although computers are fast becoming a part of our everyday life, they do not control it. It was we who produced them and we who should control them. The responsibility of independent progress lies with us as individual human beings. We must learn to use this responsibility both singularly and collectively. Most of all, without individuality, we could not have Whitmer and all that it has come to mean and symbolize.

The climax of the circus is the ladders act, in which only a selected few are permitted to perform.

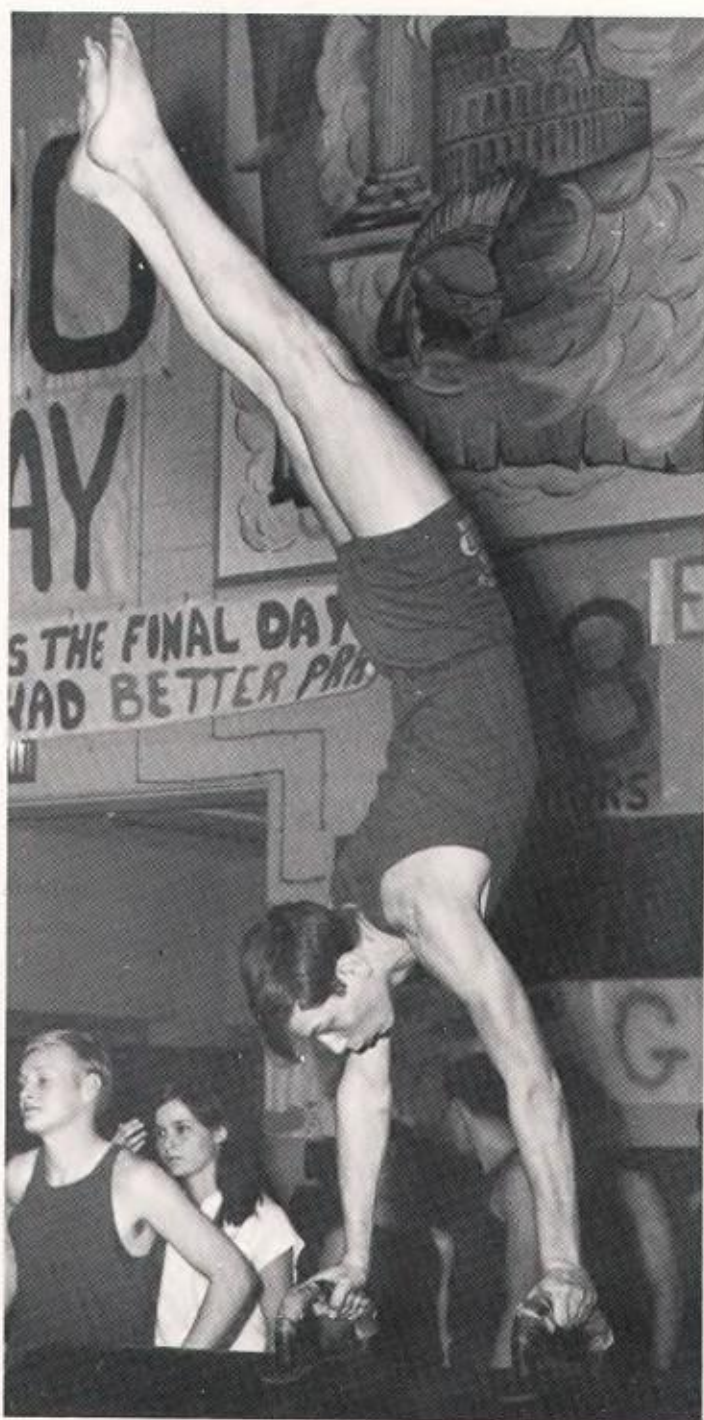

Mr. Stacy, who willingly directed the circus since its beginning, lays down the laws for the participants to follow.

The thirty-third annual Whitmer Circus began slowly, starting with the grand march, and picked up momentum until the ladders act climaxed the show. Throughout the years all the acts are basically the same, but each year different students compose new routines, some of which are set to music, depending on the act.

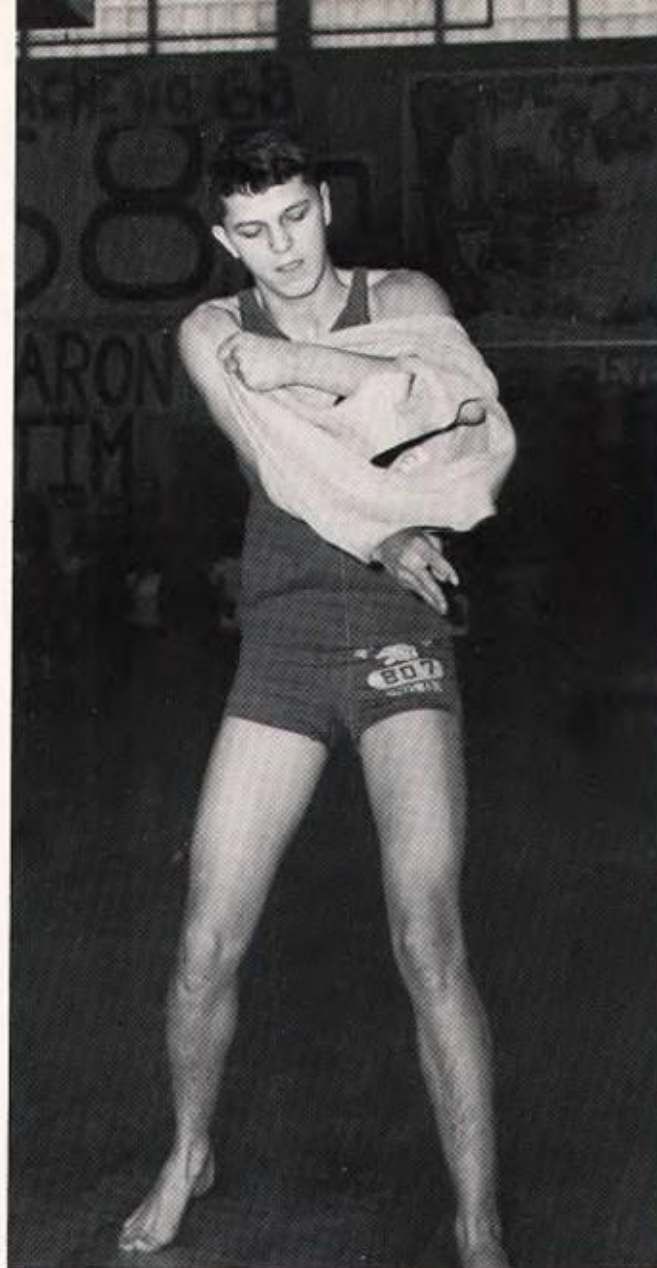

Of all the circus routines, calisthenics proved to be the most popular act. This act consisted of girls who executed warm-up exercises and other drills to music. For advanced co-ed, two-man throws, two-man girls, and elementary co-ed, the participants needed a considerable knowledge of the skills used. They worked many long and hard hours perfecting their routines until they suited them best. Students trained to perform on various apparatus put on a superb display of skills as the vaulting began. The parallel bars, wood horse, and balance beams also had students performing routines on them during this time. Between acts, the clowns provided an amusing diversion for the capacity crowds. The show ended with the highly specialized ladders act and a formal tribute to Mr. Stacy, who directed his last circus.

Gymnasts excel with matchless dexterity to delight crowds.

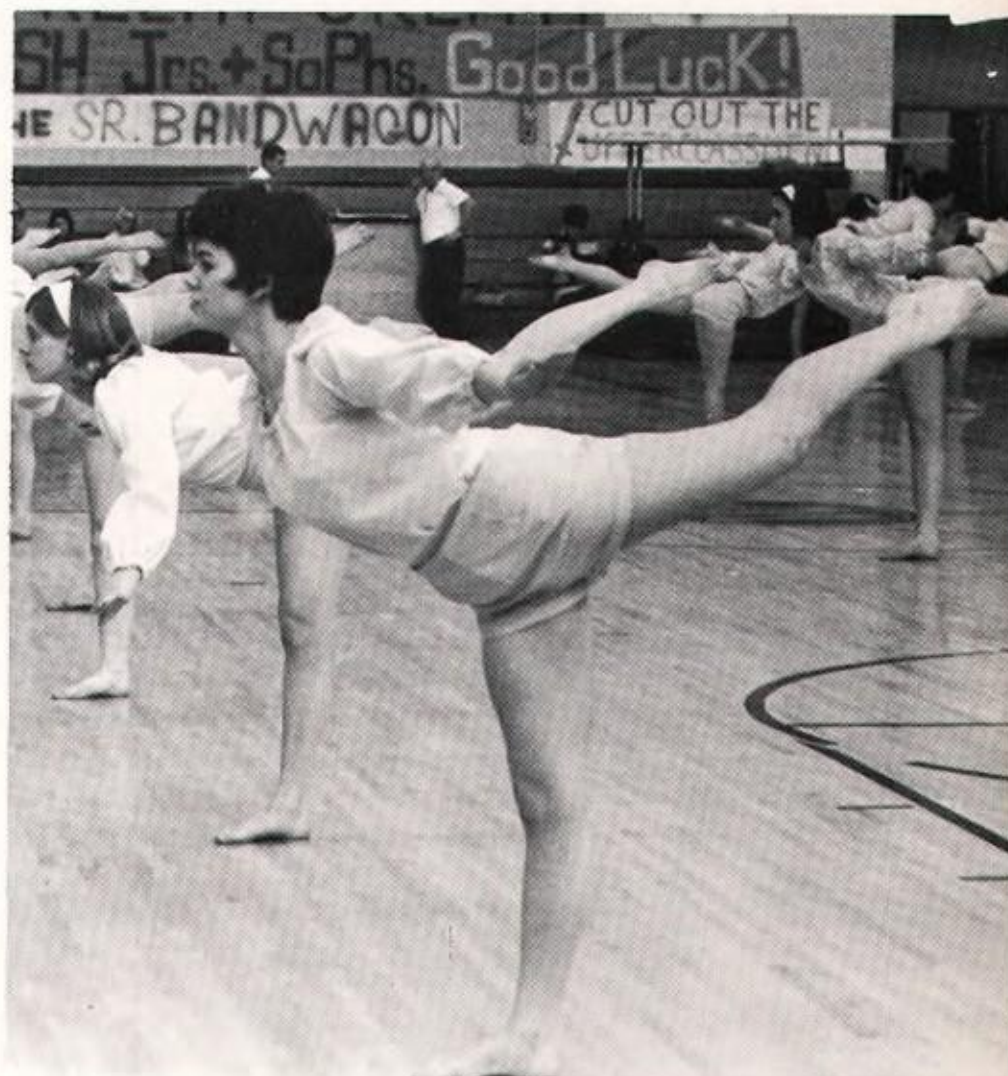

After long hours of practice, concentrated effort makes Bob Churchill's handstand flawless.

Georgia Vrahotes holds a scale, one of the many exercise forms set to music in calisthenics.

During the relays, Dave Hill struggles to beat the clock and to boost his team to a large lead over the other squads.

Students stage mock convention to gain political insight.

For the first time at Whitmer, students staged a mock Republican convention to decide among themselves upon a suitable candidate to run for the office of president. The caucus took place on May, 17, 1968, in the Whitmer auditorium. Presiding as chairman of the convention was Bill Wallace, and assistants who recorded notes were Su Edgington and Anna Williams, vice-president and secretary respectively. The guest speaker was Senator Cook, who opened the caucus with a speech.

Each state was represented by a history class and each person counted as one vote. After the platform was decided upon and approved, the candidates were then nominated. On the first ballot favorite sons were nominated. As the second ballot came, states started shifting their weight to the majority candidates who were: Mr. Nixon, Mr. Rockefeller, and Mr. Reagan. After a long battle, Mr. Rockefeller was nominated by a close margin of 675 votes to Mr. Nixon's 658.

Senator Cook, the guest speaker at the convention, greets fellow Republicans after arriving at the Whitmer auditorium.

Rocky supporters enthusiastically wave their signs to prove to the convention that its presidential strength lies in New York's favorite son candidate.

Bill Wallace, who presided over the mock Republican convention, glimpses over some notes before addressing his fellow delegates.

The Dale Crow Award, started in 1946 by an anonymous donor, honors a former Whitmer student and teacher, Dale Crow. Mr. Crow attended the University of Toledo and after graduating in 1938 as an honor student, he began teaching at Whitmer. World War I then broke out and he was assigned to the South Pacific, where he later perished in a flight over Wake Island.

Each year the Dale Crow Award is given to the outstanding senior boy who excelled in scholarship, athletics, and leadership. Greg Wojciechowski, the 1968 recipient, specialized in wrestling and it was well worth the effort and training. On his home mat he took the heavyweight division title in spite of unfavorable odds. He then journeyed on to Columbus to win the heavyweight division in the state of Ohio. He was also a strong contender for the Olympics heavyweight class. Continuing in athletics, Greg is now on the wrestling squad at the University of Toledo.

Coveted Dale Crow Award captured by Greg Wojciechowski.

Wojo receives heartiest congratulations from Mr. Brumbaugh on his newest conquest.

As Diane Ruff sings, her three ardent admirers harmonize to the beat of the tune, "Tom, Dick, or Harry."

Standing ovations compliment superb musical talents.

Kiss Me Kate, presented by the student body last May, will long be remembered for its colorful language, outstanding actors, and its expertly designed set. The musical was directed by Mr. Paul Slovak and the choreography was done by Mr. Doug Beehler. The music was provided by the pit band under the direction of Mr. Meihls.

The musical opened with a Baltimore revival of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew. The lead actors and actresses had double rolls to assume, their role in reality and the character role in the play. The plot revolved around a series of quarrels between a divorced husband and wife, in reality Graham and Lilli, and is carried on through the show by their other stage characters, Petruchio and Katherine. They soon realized life without each other was unbearable and were reunited to give the show its happy ending.

Informal actors and actresses explain to the audience the jitters of that first night in "Another Op'nin, Another Show."

Mark Davies and John Hirsle, decked out in costumes for the finale, vividly portray the roles of the gangsters.

Ron Paoletti, as Petruchio, and Marsha Mitruk, as Katherine, gaze fondly at one another and decide that divorce is not meant for them after all.

The chorus puts its best foot forward before it begins another colorful dancing escapade.

1969 Homecoming Queen

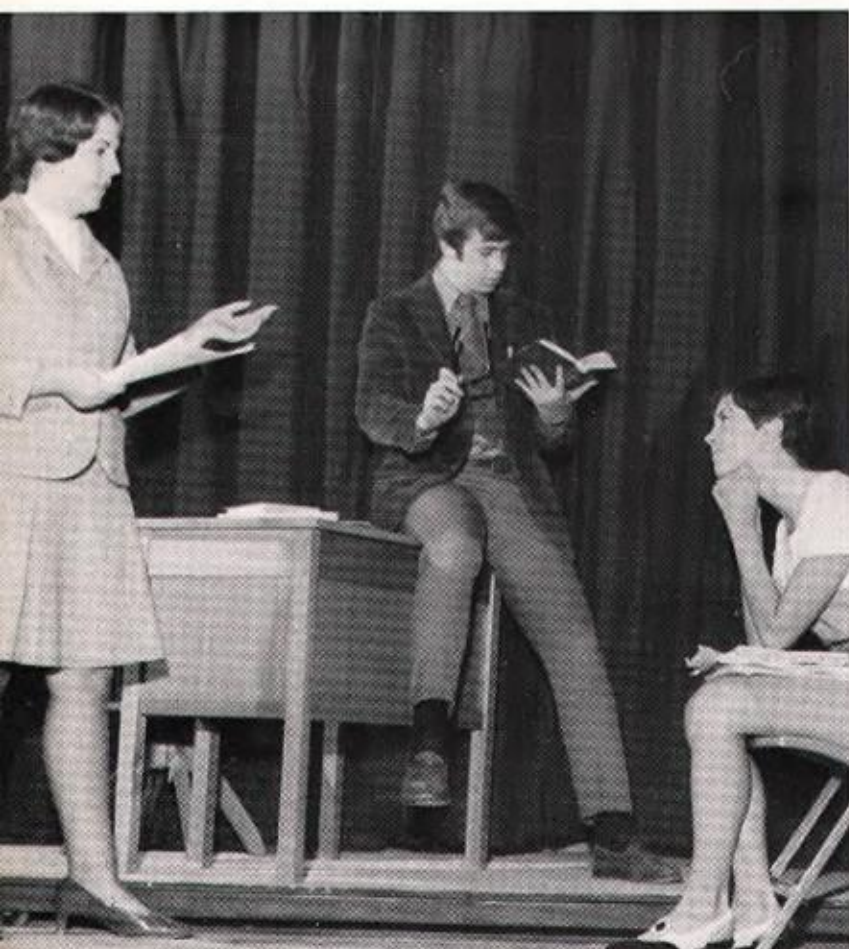

Homecoming dance tops off enjoyable week of activities.

Homecoming week had numerous events scheduled. Thursday, the snake dance twisted its way through traffic and ended in a roaring pep session at Whitmer's stadium. At this time the junior and sophomore attendants were named, Beth Davies and Judy Hamilton respectively. The crowning of the queen came the next night at the Whitmer-Fostoria game. By halftime, the Panther gridders had piled up considerable points, and Donna Navarre, last year's queen, crowned Mary Scofield the 1969 homecoming queen amid cheering crowds.

"Voyage to the Unknown", the dance theme, added to the festivity of the week and complimented the individual class floats which proudly transported the queen and her court during halftime. The week ended Sunday morning when juniors tied seniors in a fast moving game of powder puff football.

While Mike Mitchel studies his script, Nancy Rightmeyer listens attentively as Irene Skulas, student director, explains the next scene.

As Lindell Elliot calls Nancy Rightmeyer into the side room for a moment, Jane Tongring takes the opportunity to unburden her troubles on Nancy's father.

Jim McNatt welcomes Nancy Rightmeyer home with a big hug as Rick Wager, her present boyfriend, waits patiently.

Seniors present rousing comedy to amuse audiences.

The senior class play, Take Her, She's Mine, was a comical escapade of a young girl's changing personality as she goes from the small town life to the big city for an education. It seemed that every time Molly came back home for a visit, she had a different outlook on life. She arrived home once as a sleeky sophisticate with an accent, and another time as a barefoot hippie. Each change was more radical than before, causing her poor father to have several nervous breakdowns.

Despite her constant changes and hangups, everything took a turn for the better as it was only one of those growing pains. She was only searching for her identity in the mass crowd.

The scene ends as a sensible Molly comes home to stay, only to say good-bye to her younger sister who is going away to college.

Debbie Morey and Debbie Weills watch unbelievably as the rumba king, Keith Ward, does his thing.

While Debbie extracts details of the incident from Nancy, John Irwin is terrorized by Steve Williams' fatherly rages.

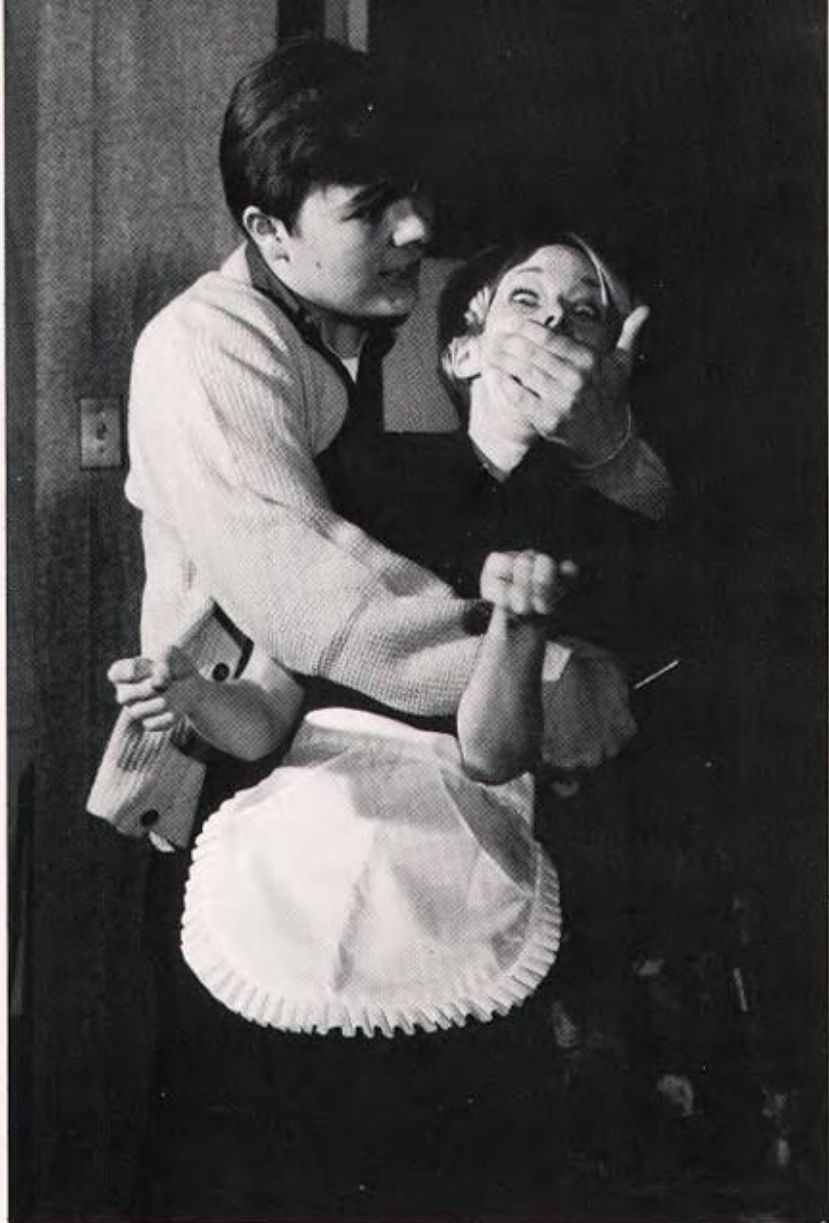

Jeff Nelson receives an emphatic lecture from Barb Herzog, an overpowering real estate saleswoman, on the advantages of selling his home without delay.

The murder witness, Pat Savidge, struggles hysterically to free herself from Jeff Nelson's firm grip.

Comedy weaves wacky writer into murder plot of gangster.

"The Gazebo," presented by the junior class, was a rousing comedy centered around a wacky, scatter-brained writer. The plot was based on a mistaken murder of which Jeff Nelson, the writer, supposedly believed he committed. In a moment of desperation after the murder, he disposed of the body by burying it in the wet cement base of his newly erected gazebo. After he thought he had safely evaded the police, friends of the deceased gangster finally forced him to admit to the crime and demanded the whereabouts of the body. While at the police inquiry, evidence was produced to prove his innocence. It appeared that the bullet entirely missed its target and became embedded in the wall close to where the victim was standing. Thus, the determined cause of death was a heart attack and the writer was released from his former charges.

Music softly plays in the background as Lucia Urso gazes fondly into her husband's eyes as they dance the minuet.

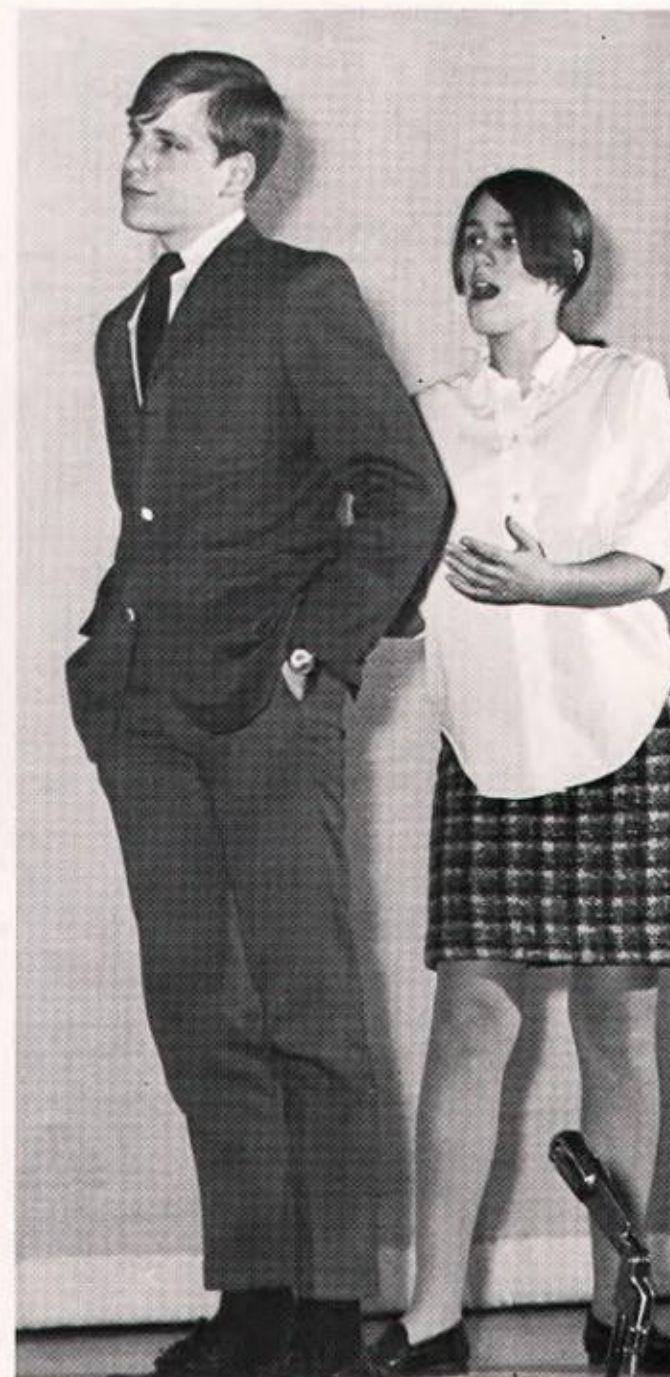

As the detectives reiterate the moves and motives of the murder plot, Rick Krolak hastily writes, so as not to miss a single detail.

Jeff Konzal, enacting the role of the frustrated neighborhood banker, explains his counterfeit money situation to the FBI agents.

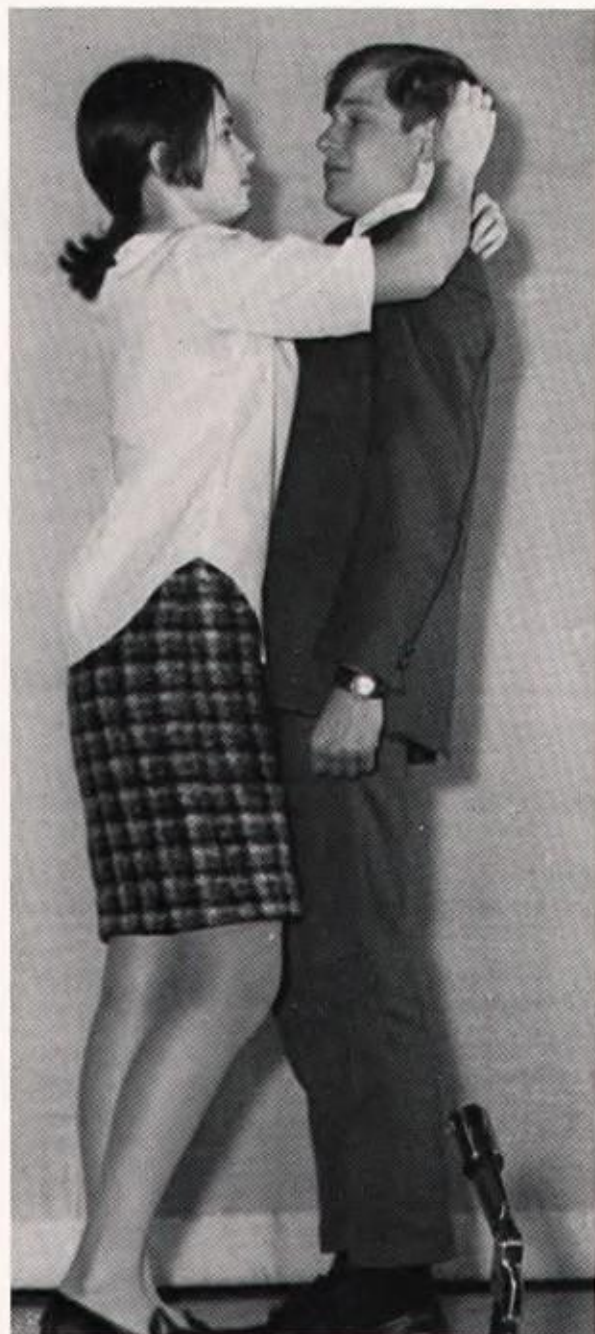

Maude counterfeits money and incites police suspicion.

While Dottie May tries to appeal to Jim Kirchenbauer's emotions during the song, "Marry Me," Jim resolutely glances away.

Pit band members take time out for a breather after a fast moving scene.

A reluctant Jim Kirchenbaur suddenly realizes his fate is cast after giving in to the gentle persuasiveness of Dottie May.

The bank scene ends after the musical members finish their lively tune.

The unusual hobby of an old lady, Grandma Maude, leads a ring of characters on a merry, mixed-up romp in the Washington-Jefferson Musical. The plot weaves around Maude and her pastime, the making of counterfeit money to give to her favorite charities. The money is circulated by her unsuspecting nephew when he deposits it in the neighborhood bank. The president of the bank is quite upset when he learns his bank is being filtrated with counterfeit money. To complicate the scene more, the banker's daughter falls in love with Maude's nephew. Grandma is then approached by gangsters, who wish to recruit her services for their own means. All ends well as Grandma finally sells the plates, the gangsters are arrested and jailed, and Maude is given the "Saginaw Citizens Award."

Grandma Maude glances up apprehensively at the gangsters, while John Riggle, as Horace, belts out the song, "You Gotta Belong to a Union."

Fran, the secretary, offers her sure cure ulcer pills to her friend Jake, the theatrical manager.

A plot of intrigue leads Hi-Jinx spys to distant lands.

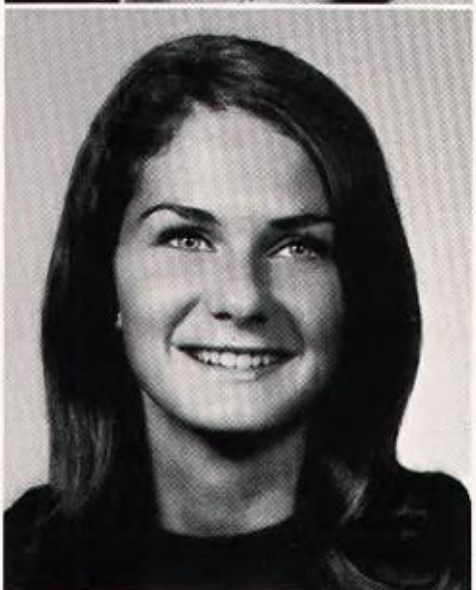

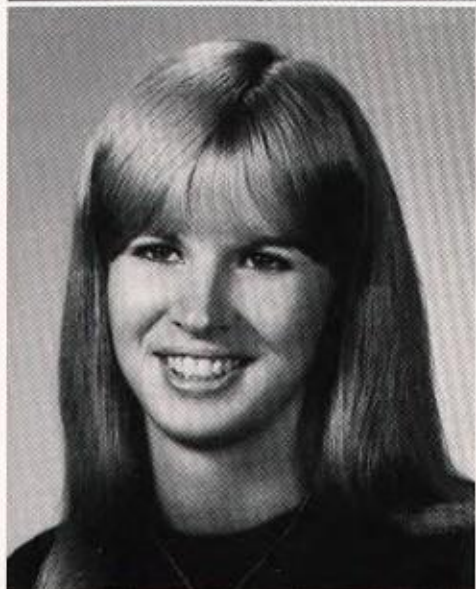

A mid-air hi-jacking was just one of the many sub-plots involved in this year's 18th annual Hi-Jinx. The yearly production was presented by the Washington student body, being written and directed by Miss Huston and Mrs. Skulas. A cast of about 175 actors, singers, dancers, and musicians displayed their acting abilities in many funny and unusual musical numbers. Themes other than the hi-jacking included a murder in London and the startling prophecies of a fortune teller. The story had actors traveling to Tahiti, London, Moscow, and Paris, all the while fighting off an international spy ring. Some of the highlights of the show were the boys chorus line and the hilarious scenes with the live dog.

Roldo Martel, the debonaire gentleman, never makes an entrance unless accompanied by his chorus girls.

As the countess expresses her innermost desires, her maid watches with great admiration and interest.

Nancy Foradas

Nancy reigns as queen.

The number of candidates for ORACLE queen was first narrowed to thirty senior girls by members of the yearbook staff. From this group, Bob Abraham, professional photographer from H. A. Powell Studios, selected the five finalists. For her photogenic beauty, Bob Abraham chose Nancy Foradas to reign as the 1969 ORACLE queen.

CURRICULUM

Mr. Harvey Davis—Administrative Assistant for Personnel

Administration and Board pioneer in educational areas.

RIGHT: Mr. David Huffman—Director of Elementary Instruction

Mr. Martin Brumbaugh—Administrative Assistant for Business and Mr. Dean DeLong—Assistant Superintendent.

Board of Education: Mr. Metzger, Dr. DeGood, Dr. Mignerey—Vice President, Mr. Thyer—President, Mr. Knisely, Mr. Benton—Clerk-Treasurer.

Education is becoming more and more a necessity for life. Thus, the board of education and the administration worked together this year to see that every pupil received the best possible education.

Establishing policy is the responsibility of the board of education. The members must approve all curriculum changes and appropriate all funds. The administration carries out these policies.

A key person in our school system is the superintendent, Mr. Nightingale. He is the chief administrator and a professional educator. He recommends changes in procedure and policy to the board.

Mr. DeLong, assistant superintendent in the Washington Local School District, is the director of secondary instruction. His main responsibility is the Whitmer complex. The director of elementary education, Mr. Huffman, is in charge of all thirteen elementary schools.

Mr. Davis, the administrative assistant for personnel, interviews and recommends to the board the names of qualified personnel. Business management for the system is the job of the administrative assistant for business, Mr. Brumbaugh. His duties include maintenance and transportation. The clerk-treasurer, Mr. Benton, keeps an account of the school district's funds and signs all checks. He also makes a monthly statement to the board showing revenues and receipts.

With the ever increasing number of elementary students, it was necessary to add seven portable classrooms. Also at the elementary level, counselors, physical education specialists, and a speech therapist joined the personnel.

This year the system received a federal grant worth $200,000.00 to aid in the expansion of the non-graded program at the secondary level. With this aid personnel, materials and equipment were obtained.

Mr. Sheckler discusses the possibility of a phase change with Cathy Carter.

Associate principal, Mr. Knauss, instructs Sandra Felix as to the procedures for taking a telephone message.

As principal of the Whitmer complex, Mr. Jones had the responsibility to see that the best possible education was available to all students, to establish a curriculum that would take care of the students' needs, to correlate the operation of all three buildings, and to make the best utilization of all facilities. Much of Mr. Jones' day was spent in meetings with administration, faculty and students. He also spent as much time as possible throughout all areas of the building in order to keep in personal contact with teachers and students.

Mr. Sheckler, Whitmer's associate principal in charge of curriculum, scheduled students for the coming year. His duties included observing teachers in the classroom, and guiding teachers and students who had come to observe.

Mr. Alvarez, Whitmer's associate principal in charge of student activities, developed general policies concerning discipline for all three buildings. He directed student affairs that did not pertain to curriculum such as organizations, advisers, and pep sessions. Putting out an activities calendar each week was also his responsibility.

Two associate principals, Mr. Bender and Mr. Knauss, were at the Washington and Jefferson buildings, respectively. Their responsibilities included scheduling next year's classes and evaluating new teachers to the system. Each week the principals had conferences to coordinate the activities of all three buildings.

The assistant principals at the Washington and Jefferson buildings were Mr. Brechbill and Mr. Holden, respectively, who assisted the principals at all times. They kept files of absences and tardiness, functioned as athletic directors for their schools, and worked with the Lucas County attendance officer.

As Director of Research and Development, Mr. Aufderheide coordinated all the personnel under Title III activities. He controlled the finances provided for in the grant and did the bookkeeping. Reporting the latest developments to the U.S. State Department of Education, conducting workshops for teachers, hosting visitors who came to Whitmer, and making speeches about the Title III program to various organizations were his responsibility.

Mrs. Scofield looks over the schedule board while preparing to make a class change.

While Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Blazey discuss a quest phase application, Mrs. Williamson looks for a card in the student files.

Performing one of her daily duties, Mrs. Heaton reads the announcements.

All the secretaries in the Whitmer complex were quite busy with their various jobs. Mrs. Pontius, the bookkeeper, spent most of her day keeping books and writing receipts in Mr. Jones' office. A daily activity also included directing students to the right office. The secretary in Mr. Jones' office, Mrs. Miller, took dictation, typed letters and forms, kept the budget, opened the mail, and answered teachers' and students' requests.

In Mr. Alvarez's office, Mrs. Feaver and Mrs. Schaefer were busy making out attendance lists, making out transcripts for college bound students, working out point averages, and filing permanent record cards. Both secretaries typed and mimeographed daily announcements which managed to keep students informed.

Making out schedules, enrolling new students, and making phase changes were among Mrs. Scofield's daily duties as Mr. Sheckler's secretary in the curriculum office. She also served as a notary public and registrar for prospective draftees.

Mrs. Crabb, secretary at Washington, changed schedules, counted money, and typed the absence lists. Many times she made transcripts of former students' grades and test scores.

Mrs. Heaton, secretary at Jefferson, did a variety of jobs during the year. Everyday she composed the absence lists, handled the school store money, and distributed mail and bulletins to the faculty.

The new secretary for the counselors, Mrs. Williamson, did all the typing for correspondence. She did all the filing and took money for college entrance tests.

Mrs. Blazey, a secretary in the Title III office, typed packets and program applications for grants. Writing out the conference calendar was another one of her many jobs. The other secretary in the Title III office, Mrs. Andrews, took applications for quest phasing and independent study. She was also in charge of the Resource Centers in the three buildings.

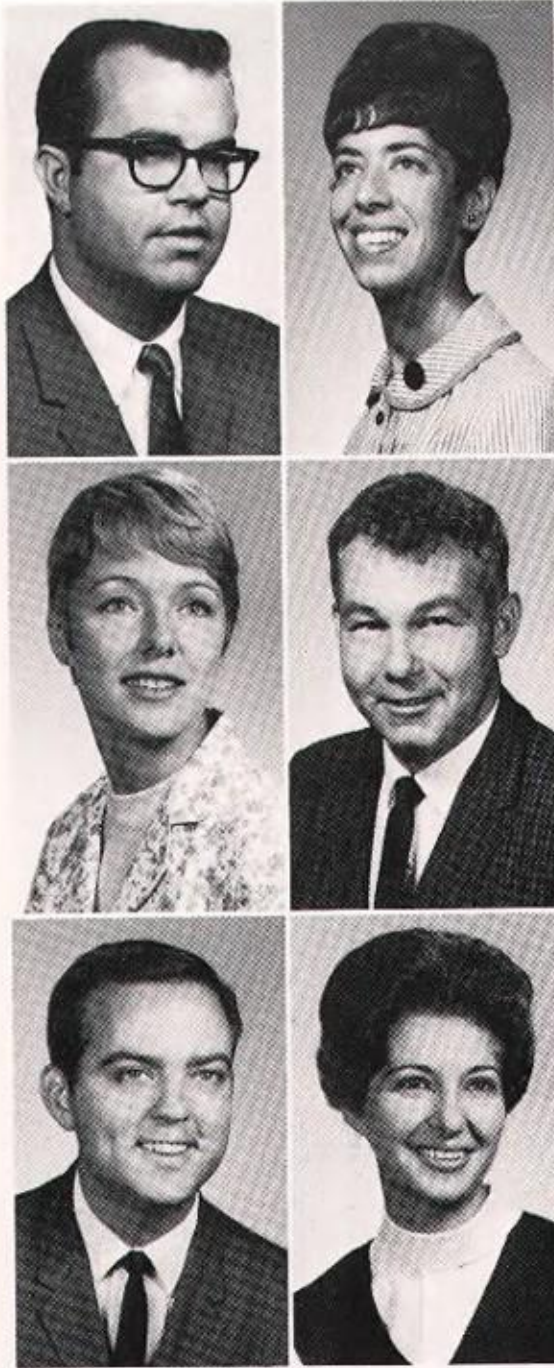

While stuffing the mailboxes, Mrs. Feaver and Mrs. Schaefer find time to chat.

Typing out the absence list keeps Mrs. Crabb very busy in the morning.

Three full-time nurses and one part-time nurse in the Whitmer complex administered first aid and notified the doctor when necessary. Along with their other responsibilities, the nurses were in charge of the boys' and girls' health rooms.

Two indispensable people at Whitmer High School were the dean of boys and the dean of girls. The persons who filled these positions set the standards for good conduct, handled disciplinary problems, and kept attendance records.

In the Whitmer complex, five new counselors joined the staff whose main goal was to better self understanding for the individual. In addition to counseling, this goal was met through services such as test administration and interpretation. Occupational information helped students discover new job opportunities and to identify with careers. Educational information was easily obtained through the library of college catalogues. During the course of the year, representatives of business, trade, and universities spoke to interested students. Individual and group counseling was available in order that the student might make realistic decisions concerning immediate problems and thus be better prepared to meet the challenges of the future.

Special courses satisfy students' individual needs.

This year a definite increase in attendance and book circulation was noted in the library. The library was open all day so students could utilize their unscheduled time while soft music played in the background. Lounge furniture, carrels, and newspaper and magazine racks were all additions which encouraged student use. The librarians, library clerks and other assistants initially instructed and then encouraged the students to work as independently as possible without constant supervision.

The Occupational Work Experience program facilitated the needs of students who could benefit from a combination of academic and occupational experiences. This class spent one-half day working and one-half day in class studying the required subjects while the value of employment experience was stressed. Such opportunities were directed toward the service fields which offered excellent on-the-job training and exceptional advancement opportunities in the restaurant, automotive, and allied fields.

The library is kept going by indispensable workers like Mrs. Downing, library clerk, and Naomi Knepper, student assistant.

Distributive education presented interested junior and senior students with the principles and practices of merchandising. Each individual was trained according to his interests, abilities and needs. A business attitude toward the job and the customers was developed by working the school bookstore and further by seniors doing coordinated part-time work. A practical background was provided for those who go on to further formal training as well as for those who go directly into the business world.

Special education enabled students to learn at their own potential, and each student was able to receive individual instruction. This year freshman and eighth grade special education was taught at the Jefferson building.

Under the direction of JAlan Aufderheide and four department heads, Mr. Corfman, Mr. Ice, Mr. Larson, and Mrs. Towe, acting as coordinators, Washington Local Schools applied for a Title III operational grant to further the concept of individualized instruction in the Whitmer complex. The grant was approved in June, 1968. The Washington Local School District was one of the six schools in the state of Ohio that were granted the funds from a field of sixty-five applicants.

Early in July, the project director, the coordinators, and twenty team members met to structure the means of achieving the goals of the concepts of independent study, quest centers, learning activity packets, audio-visual aids, and resource centers.

Mr. Corfman, chairman of the mathematics department, headed the learning activity packet concept. Packets permit students to learn and progress at a rate determined by their own abilities and interests. During the school year packets were used in math, science, history, and foreign languages.

The learning process of a freshman speech class is broadened as Mr. O'Reilly films Joel Scheinbach in order that his speech may be evaluated.

Mrs. Duesing and Mrs. Lemerand instruct Robert Williams in the proper procedure for using simultaneously the film strip viewer and the tape deck.

Another area of the Title III program was the quest center under the direction of Mr. Ice, chairman of the science department. Although the quest center could not be put into operation during the school year due to lack of facilities, the theory of this concept inspires student self-direction. A quest center is an activity center where students enter into experimental research in a chosen field.

Although the audio-visual center headed by Mr. O'Reilly did not directly affect the students, it was an important aspect of their education. Teachers were able to learn preparation of tapes, slides, lamination and mounting of materials for classroom use. The video tape recorder was an excellent instrument used for both teacher and student evaluation.

To preserve important material, Mrs. Spaulding dry mounts a picture for a teacher to use in a display.

Using an instrument made available through the Title III grant, Mr. O'Reilly duplicates slides for the school complex.

Mrs. Konczal and Mrs. Nelson contemplate new material to expand the resource centers at Washington.

Paraprofessionals advance scope of educational quests.

The independent study program was conducted by Mr. Larson, chairman of the social studies department. This program involved two types of independent study. Full-time independent study allowed students to pursue a year or more of their education completely on their own. Nineteen students were selected at random as members of this experimental group. These students were not compelled to attend classes nor do assigned homework, but they had to keep in contact with the teaching staff and project coordinator as well as attend school six hours a day. A group approximately the same size was chosen as a structured control group so that a comparison could be drawn between the groups. The second type was called quest-phase independent study which allowed students to study additional subjects not available in the curriculum.

Student assistants, Linda Liegus, Nada Apt, Vickie Ansted, and Sue Downing, relieve Mrs. Lemerand of some of the ever present tasks in the math-science resource center.

Sheila Sa, Bob Johnston, Becky Wildman, and Robin Robertson assist Mrs. Duesing as library aides in the humanities resource center.

Mrs. Towe, English department chairman, was project coordinator for the resource centers. A humanities center and a math-science center were set up in each of the three buildings. Six paraprofessionals were employed to serve the centers. The centers were furnished with "wet" carrels for audio-visual purposes and "dry" carrels for research and study. Lounge furniture was installed to stimulate reading for pleasure, and soft music played in the background. Students were encouraged to use the centers as places of activity and independent thinking.

During the school year, workshops were held on Wednesday evenings to involve teachers other than team members in the project. Stations were set up for all five of the Title III areas so the teachers could work with the team members. The teachers had certain objectives to accomplish for each concept so they could acquire a better understanding of the Title III program and its operation. Teachers were also encouraged to delve more deeply into any area in which they were particularly interested.

It is felt that four concepts of the grant are well under way in aiding teachers to individualize their programs and helping students achieve self-direction.

Paraprofessionals, Mrs. Elliott and Mrs. Kosovec, prepare to demonstrate equipment in the humanities resource center at Jefferson.

Students acquire business skills in block programs.

This year the business department added a business block program which was designed to teach the mechanics of office practices. The students entered in this program spent three hours a day in the classroom studying and putting to use the different skills which they had learned. In this way a student could not only learn business in general but also a special field in which he was interested. At the end of the two year program students were eligible to apply for the respective office job.

The stenographer block offered training in shorthand, office practice, and beginning bookkeeping. The use of the duplicating machine and ten-key adding machine was practiced by the juniors in this block. Seniors in this block studied in more detail shorthand, transcription, business law, economics, business machines, and business English. All of the courses were taught in the classroom along with actual office practice instruction. The goal of all these students was to build speed and accuracy in stenographic procedures.

While juniors in the clerk/typist block were presented Bookkeeping I, office practice, business law, economics, and business English, the seniors studied clerical office practice, business machines, business communications, and skill building in mathematics. This block program was geared to the student desiring a receptionist position in the business world.

The account/bookkeeping block taught bookkeeping, office practice, business law, economics, and business English to the juniors. Working with figures, these students found the money aspect of business to be very demanding yet challenging. Bookkeeping II, business communications, mathematics skill building, and business machines were taught to the seniors in the account/bookkeeping block. They were also introduced to data processing which would be of use later.

Learning common business procedures and filling out everyday business forms were part of the record keeping curriculum. In bookkeeping students learned how to keep special journals and subsidiary ledgers. Notehand equipped students with an easy and efficient way of taking notes for both personal and executive use. Office practice students applied skill in letter and manuscript writing and achieved neatness, speed, and accuracy in typing. Shorthand emphasized correct English usage, spelling and punctuation while learning to take speed dictation. Typing taught familiarity of the keyboard, and the mechanics and general use of the typewriter.

Business law, a senior course, dealt with the application of law common to daily life as an aid in avoiding legal difficulties. It also covered such topics as contracts, negotiable instruments, and bailments.

Business machines was designed to instruct students in how to operate executive machines. Calculators, adding machines, mimeographs, and duplicators were a few of the machines available.

Business math taught problems dealing with savings and investments, home ownership, travel and transportation, taxes, and numerous other types of situations faced in everyday life.

Consumer economics presented concepts of family and personal needs. Ways to manage money, how to save wisely, and information about insurance were discussed.

The sales class' objective was to teach the principles of selling. Understanding current business practices and developments was combined with personal ability and skill to make a good salesman.

Learning the use of the accounts receivable machine is only one of the many skills developed in business machines.

Musicians as well as drivers focus on concentrations.

The marching band, a voluntary band which existed during football season, met two weeks during the summer to practice and get in shape. Half-time and pre-game shows were worked out and memorized and music was prepared to be played after the game. The Whitmer complex also had four concert bands and each performed during the year. The string program started in the fifth grade and each year the class is offered one level higher, thus expanding and improving the group. Each of the three schools had a stage band in which various syncopated rhythms were studied. The stage bands played at regular band concerts as well as special featured concerts. In the theory branch of the Whitmer music department, a new class, introduction to music, was added this year. A knowledge of the basic fundamentals of music was acquired which is very helpful for the student who will be pursuing a curriculum such as elementary education in college, where some musical background is required. Also in the theory department was the course Theory I which was designed for students with considerable music experience and covered harmonic analysis, ear training, sight singing, melody writing, and transposition.

In the vocal department, Whitmer's a cappella choir participated in assemblies, the Christmas concert, and commencement. Jefferson and Washington choirs performed in a combined musical, and Washington choirs sang in the Hi-Jinx show.

Since the state now requires all students under eighteen to take a driver's education course, Whitmer expanded its program to accommodate the increasing number of such students. Driver's education was a nine weeks course with students attending classes four days a week and driving two days. After learning highway laws and safety procedures, the students applied their knowledge by operating vehicles donated by area automotive dealers.

Following weeks of vigorous campaigning by Whitmer students, Julie Smith casts her vote in the mock presidential election.

1968 was a year of great political happenings and the social studies department made the most of the many exciting events. The Mock Political Convention, held in May, was the springboard for the year. Studied very closely were the complicated and controversial election process in the November election, the opening of the ninety-first Congress, and the inauguration of the thirty-seventh president of the United States. It was hoped that all this in some way would bring both peace in Southeast Asia and understanding at home. It was really a year for the American history and American government classes.

A number of social studies classes made use of some new and innovative ideas for learning. Academic games could be seen in the American government and history classes, as well as the complicated Inter-Nation Simulation exercise in the world affairs classes. Sociology classes made more use of independent study than ever before, while a few American history classes used Learning Activity Packets as a form of self-paced independent study. Such topics as the Constitution and American immigration were included in the individual packets. The sociology classes also heard many guest speakers talk on important and controversial topics.

The economics students watched as the daily news changed their textbooks with regularity as the world and domestic financial situations fluctuated.

World history students tried their best to understand the great information explosion known as the world history survey course. Geography took on a new perspective this year because of the momentous events concerning the Apollo flights to the moon. Students saw that to work in the new frontier of space, they would have to have a greater understanding of the earth. Students also studied the terrains of various countries and thus became more aware of the effects geography and the climate have on civilization.

Eighth grade students were required to begin their study of American history. Current events and watching for articles in periodicals gave them a fundamental background for their American history course as juniors.

The acquisition of the Title III grant made it possible for the Social Studies department to expand its courses and to purchase tapes, filmstrips, and academic games for the benefit of study. The materials and resources in the humanities resource center were also greatly used by students who wanted to delve more deeply into a subject area or topic.

"English isn't what it used to be." This statement was often made by parents when discussing curriculum during Open House. How innovative the English department of Whitmer was during the school year could be shown in its varied activities.

Many new materials were added to the departmental inventory. Contemporary plays and novels in paperback were welcomed by the students. Mounted art masterpieces, laminated materials, and transparencies were great aids as instructional materials. Tapes, filmstrips, and slides were placed in the humanities resource center to be used by students working independently.

Two new teaching teams were added to the curriculum. Besides the established American traditions team, a phase 3 American literature team was added. A phase 2 team in American history and literature was also very successful. This team helped to improve the students' understanding of other religions and races by inviting speakers to the classroom throughout the year. Clergy from the Baptist, Methodist, Lutheran, Church of God, and Jehovah Witnesses churches were guests for these symposiums. A representative from Harambee, the black economic organization, gave a talk on black power and how it could be used non-violently. Another interesting program involved a discussion of welfare problems by several mothers who had participated in a protest march to the county welfare office. The reading centers were beneficial to students interested in a self-improvement course. At the beginning of each nine week session, students were tested and a program was designed to fit their individual needs. Particularly in this course, students worked at their own level of achievement and rate of learning. Neither grades nor credit was given and thus the student was free in the process of learning without any pressure. Students desiring additional time in the course returned on an open lab basis.

In the Jefferson building phase 1 students were scheduled for a semester of reading. In the Washington building phase 2 students took the course for one nine week period. Phase 3 students in the Whitmer building were scheduled in reading for one nine weeks and classes were available to volunteers from any phase in all three buildings.

The latest techniques for teaching reading and the newest instruments were utilized in the reading centers. One instrument used to a great extent was the controlled reader. This instrument improved the comprehension of the student because there was no possibility of rereading material. It was necessary for students to concentrate, to read accurately, to organize thoughts, and to remember correctly.

The tachistoscope, which was also used, helped students to sharpen their power of visual perception and retention. The skills developed by this machine were used by students not only in reading but in spelling and mathematics as well.

Light moving down a page of print was the method in which the shadowscope was able to break established eye-movement patterns and substitute more efficient ones. This instrument aided concentration and could be used with any book or magazine instead of specifically prepared materials.

The program of tape recordings was designed to introduce good listening habits with greater attention, discrimination, organization, and retention. Each lesson introduced a specific skill or concept such as outlining, note taking, skimming, scanning, and summarizing.

The ever increasing responsibility of preparing students with the knowledge of a language was faced by all the teachers in the foreign language department this year. Conversation about current events, use of overhead projectors, dialogues, discussions, and debates enabled students to gain more knowledge of the language they chose to study. Along with their four required subjects, some eighth grade students chose an elective of either Spanish or French.

This year's fourth year Spanish students discussed novels and cultural readers, while some students received extra credit by preparing quizzes or by asking questions in Spanish to the class. Third year Spanish students progressed in their language by reading stories in books and then answering questions in Spanish. A few first and second year Spanish students worked independently, taking tests when they were ready, while most students learned by using activity packets.

The use of the opaque projector to show pictures from books and papers were used by Spanish classes. Eighth grade Spanish students used tape recorders and read dialogues, while learning the basic skills of the language.

Many original dialogues and skits were written by first and second year German classes with both characters and plot created by the students. Brainstorming sessions to discuss certain items were formed in some German classes in order that the students could learn to speak freely in that language and gain better pronunciation skills.

While all sophomores were required to take physical education five days a week, the program was optional to juniors and seniors. Those sophomores who had not yet taken a course in reading were required to spend one nine weeks period in a reading program. The corrective gym was available for those students who were not able to participate in the regular physical education activities.

Soccer, speed ball, and touch football were played by both boys and girls despite the cool autumn weather. Also some girls learned skills in archery, while the boys were taught speed-away. Once inside, basketball squads were chosen for both boys and girls, and tournaments were played until Christmas vacation.

Before tumbling mats were brought out, boys used weights for conditioning, and girls studied body mechanics and conditioning. Five weeks of tumbling was then required for all students. Some electives were offered to those who did not wish to continue with tumbling. Those students who continued with tumbling practiced many hours after school to improve their acts for the circus.

Early in spring tumbling mats were put away and volleyball nets were set up for all classes. With the return of warm weather, students selected teams for softball until the end of the year.

The physical fitness test was given to all freshmen in the fall. During the year students used apparatus for tumbling and were graded on their stunts. In the early spring volleyball games were played, and when the warm weather returned, softball teams were chosen.

In the Jefferson building all students were required to take one semester of five day physical education. Throughout the year both boys and girls were active in sports such as softball, soccer, speed ball, and football. In the spring students were taught different skills in tumbling.

Gym classes offer the opportunity to compete in sports.

All health classes were coeducational, and were held in the Washington building this past year. The health sessions were coordinated with the ninth grade science course.

One major topic studied by the students was the systems of the body. Also included was an entire unit on sex education. The County and State Department provided films which helped the students gain more knowledge of each topic. Other units covered mental health, first aid, cigarette smoking, narcotics, alcohol, and drug abuse. All of these topics were stressed with emphasis on students' views and attitudes.

General math and algebra develop ability to analyze.

The mathematics department individualized instruction, used mathematical games and puzzles, and expanded the math-science resource center in order to provide for more of the students' needs.

General math covered addition, subtraction, multiplication, division, fractions, and the basic laws of operation. This course was offered to eighth and ninth grade students in order to give them some mathematical background whether or not they continued their study of math.

Intermediate math further pursued the concepts of general math in addition to covering new areas. Bases, proportions, ratios, graphing of sets, and real numbers were some of the main topics included. A good background for beginning algebra was provided for by the intermediate math course.

Algebra I included the basics of algebra and was offered to students who were interested in starting a major in mathematics. Definitions of algebraic terms were used to solve crossword puzzles. Students did group work and used study sheets with chapter summaries in preparation for tests.

Visual aids bring about improvement in comprehension.

Algebra II, as a continuation of algebra I, extended the real number system to the complex number system. Also included in the course were determinants, logarithms, and the graphing of first and second degree equations. The phase 4 classes used packets and some students in phase 3 worked independently.

In geometry, students learned to construct geometric figures and to prove postulates and theorems. Inductive and deductive reasoning were studied and creative thinking was stimulated by educational games and puzzles.

In keeping with Whitmer's philosophy of individualized instruction, packets were used in some of the senior math classes. Students could study analytical geometry and plane trigonometry at their own rate of learning.

General science stimulates quest for further study.

In general science, students studied the human body, and plant and animal life. Chemistry and physics were covered in a very general sense, and earth science informed the students on matters such as minerals, soil, and conservation.

Chemistry, a science that deals with composition and chemical properties of a substance, began with the traditional memorization of the symbols of elements. Knowledge of valences was useful in the balancing of equations. The study of composition, structure, and properties of elements paralleled the study of chemical reactions. Lab experiments enabled students to see and better understand the change in composition when elements are mixed.

A math background was helpful in beginning the study of physics. In learning about interactions of heat and energy, students proved and applied basic theories of force, nuclear energy and electricity. Atomic structure was studied along with nuclear phenomena.

Science paves the way toward many exciting careers.

Biology is defined as the branch of science dealing with living organisms and vital processes. With the aid of microscopes and detailed charts, biology students studied the many divisions of the plant and animal kingdoms. Starting with one-celled organisms, the lessons progressed to many celled organisms and culminated in the study of human beings. During this process, dissection and location of various organs and body systems enabled the students to understand the relation between structure, function and location.

Physiology is a branch of biology which deals in more detail with processes and activities characteristic of life or living matter. This year packets were used to enable the student to proceed at his own speed. Body systems were studied in detail and skeletons and microscopes enabled students to see the actual structures. Lab practicals evaluated the student's knowledge of the studied material. All of this led up to the dissection of the cat where many organs and systems were located.

The relation between structure and function becomes clearer to John Eggleston, Laura Farnham and Jim McNatt as they locate the bones of the skull.

Home Ec and art projects exemplify self-expression.

In home economics students worked one semester each in the planning of meals and nutrition and in learning to sew. The cooking and use of meats, casseroles, salads, vegetables, and desserts were studied in connection with the making of a complete dinner. During the semester devoted to sewing, the various fabrics and techniques of sewing were studied and applied to the making of various garments. The finished products were graded on neatness, accuracy, and evenness of the stitching.

In the art department's new painting course students worked with four media, tempera, acrylic, water, and oil paints. Art courses gave students a background in the many areas of art and the use of the color wheel and color charts. Students expressed ideas through paper and plaster sculpturing, weaving with various materials, and doing numerous pastel chalk drawings in the arts and crafts course.

Boys apply basic craftsmanship in industrial work.

In mechanical drawing students drew and constructed machine parts, geometric forms, threads, and cams. As the year went by, students drew sheet metal layouts and practiced lettering.

Working with art and sheet metal was the basis for the metals course. The boys learned the cutting and forming of various metals by both hand tools and machines. Gas and arc welding were also practiced with the use of the gas torch.

Boys in woodworking made many furniture products such as cabinets, gun cases, and end tables, and some boys made both water and snow skis.

Cosmetology I students worked for the goal of 500 hours of class time so they could work in the shop on patrons. They learned about the anatomy and the structure of the location of each muscle and nerve.

Cosmetology II students spent most of their day in the shop working with patrons and their own original hair styles. They studied manicures, permanent waves, hair coloring, facials, and styling and caring for wigs and hair pieces. Upon the completion of this course and the acquirement of 1500 hours of work, students are eligible to take the State Board Examination to become a licensed beautician.

The use of, testing of, and primary experience with industrial tubes, A.C. circuits, gas tubes, and temperature pyrometrics were taught in electronics class. The boys applied what they learned in the repairing of television sets and radios.

The use of several machines such as surface grinders, vertical and horizontal mills, drill presses, and different types of saws was taught in the machine shop this year. The boys also learned to turn metal using lathes and to make squaring operations with the shaper machines.

Nutritious meals served daily by cafeteria staffs.

The cafeteria staff of the 1968-1969 school year did another fine job. Besides serving breakfast all morning to parallel the arrival of students, they kept pace with the appetites of students at lunch time. This year the cost of the food was raised to cover the costs of ingredients, but this didn't affect the amount purchased by students. The varied selection of nutritious food was very appealing to both students and faculty members and often made the choice very difficult. Besides cheerful smiles, the cafeteria was appropriately decorated according to the holiday seasons. Student organizations also used the cafeteria to hang signs in support of the Whitmer teams in various sports.

Competent cooks and custodians perform indispensable tasks.

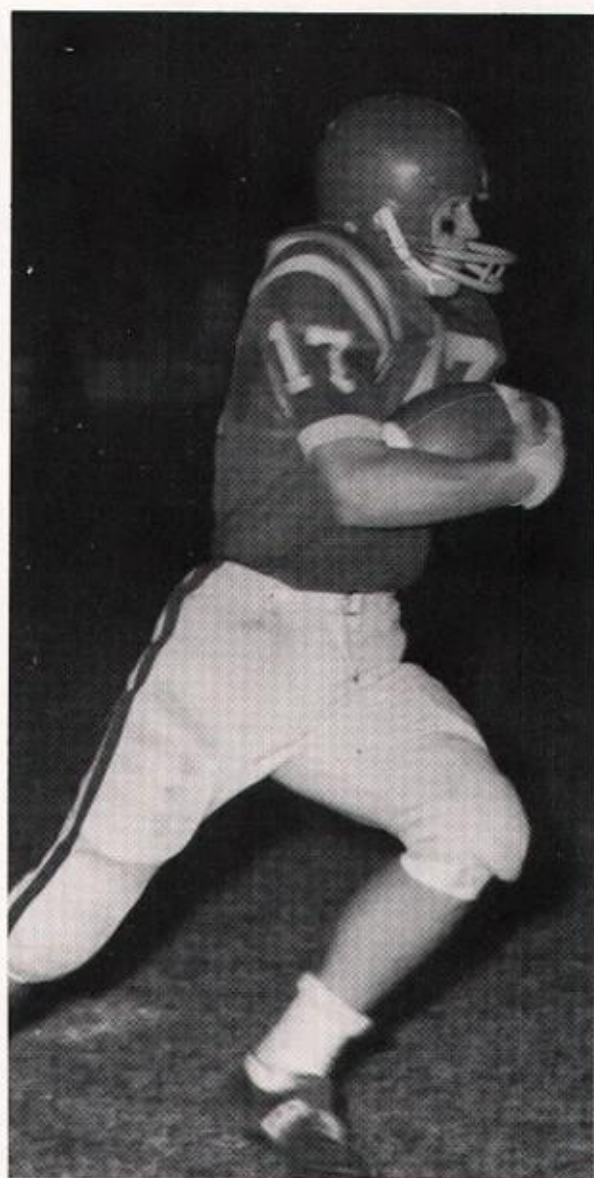

Do you remember the waxy halls, spotless windows and floors, sparkling showcases, and shiny desks? All of these indicate some of the many indispensable services rendered by the Whitmer custodians. They not only industriously worked during the school year, but the summer before involved many necessary preparations for the beginning of classes. Other chores included mowing lawns and policing the area around the three school buildings. The custodians may have also saved many people from bodily injuries by keeping the walks throughout the complex shovelled in the winter. Extra time was spent cleaning up after plays, sports events, tournaments, dances, and concerts. Thus we see, Whitmer's custodians help make the school a place of which students can be proud.

Six shut-outs, a championship team, all-state ranking, and a number one rated coach were some of the outstanding highlights of a near perfect football season for the Whitmer Panthers. The opening game of the year was marked by the dedication of the new stadium seats by Governor Rhodes. The match itself, billed as the "game of the year," resulted in a disappointing 0-0 tie as the Panthers ground their way to within inches of the goal line, but failed to score. However, Whitmer teamwork domineered the following two contests as the Panthers shut-out both Macomber and Waite. Clay was the first to score against Whitmer, but was soundly defeated by a score of 37-6. This triumph allowed Whitmer to regain possession of the Little Brown Jug for the first time in six years. The Panthers then traveled to Port Clinton to hand a 14-6 defeat to the Redskins. A 20-0 victory over Fostoria in the Homecoming game provided Whitmer with their third shut-out. In the following contests, Whitmer edged Woodward, and hammered the Start Spartans. The next league game saw the Panthers stun Sylvania on the Wildcats' homeground. The final victory of the year resulted in a shut-out over Bedford. Whitmer emerged from this game with the league championship in their last year of Great Lakes League play. The Panthers compiled a record of 9-0-1 to receive twelfth place in the Associated Press state ratings.

Whitmer dominated the all-G.L.L. teams as they placed six men on the first team and four men on the second team, while eight men received honorable mention. Those chosen for the first string squads included Chuck Krohn, Dave Rice, Dale Utt, Don Fish, Bob Peppers, and Rob Warren. Given honorable mention on the district team were Chuck Krohn, Chris Lazette, Dale Utt, and Rob Warren, while Bob Peppers was named to the district first team and received all-state honorable mention.

Although much acclaim must be awarded to the players for their outstanding season, credit is also due to the coaching staff. In his second year at Whitmer, head coach Norm Decker was named the Northwest Ohio Class AA coach of the year.

Ninth and reserve teams promise strong varsity in future.

To judge by the records the reserve and freshman football teams compiled this season, Whitmer will continue to play powerful varsity football in future years. Daily practice against the varsity strengthened the reserves and helped develop them into one of the best area teams in their class. The reserves compiled an impressive record of six wins and one loss which included four overwhelming shut-outs, and clinched first place in the Great Lakes League.

The freshman Blue and Maize teams, displaying poise and ability unusual for teams of their age, finished their seasons in strong Whitmer tradition by capturing first and third places, respectively, in the G.L.L. The Blue squad's record of four wins and one tie was unequaled by any other area freshman football team. The Maize squad, playing only four games, built up a promising record of two wins and two losses. The two squads combined to hand a sound defeat to Cardinal Stritch and compiled an over-all freshman record of eight wins two losses, and a tie.

Jefferson players gain experience as Panther gridders.

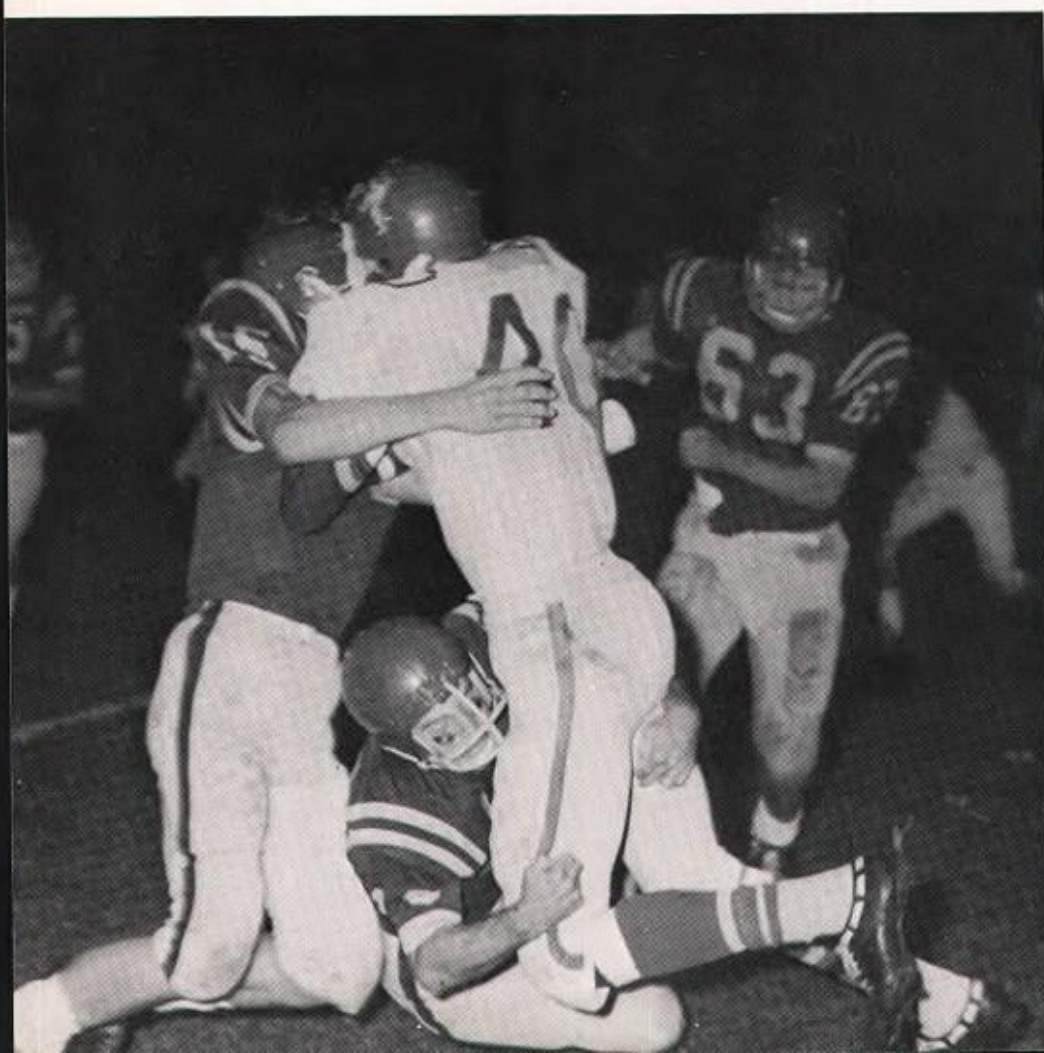

The four man coaching squad at the Jefferson building, Mr. Monica, Mr. Schulz, Mr. Turner, and Mr. Yeager, led the eighth grade team to a season's record of two wins, three losses, and one tie. The Panthers' outstanding victory over Raymer, the Toledo City League champions, marked the high point of the year when Whitmer's eighth graders handed the Raymer squad a defeat of 28 to 6. Raymer was previously unbeaten in twenty-nine matches. One of the most exciting individual moments occurred during the Springfield game, when Gavin Greanya ran 100 yards on a kickoff reception for the game's only score. Both defenses held the opposition in check a few yards from the goal line to provide an electrifying contest.

The eighth grade team promises to be a great asset to Whitmer squads in future years.

Cross-country ends rough season with GLL rank of fourth.

Although losing its opening meets, many by close margins, the cross-country team closed its season with three decisive events. The first of these was a win over Fostoria in the closing encounter of the season. The Panthers then went on to capture fourth place in the Great Lakes League meet, having been edged out of third place by one point. In the district meet, the Whitmer harriers took eleventh place.

With a large number of beginning sophomores, the team went through a building year. Showing unusual poise and ability for their ages, sophomores Jim DeRose and Bill Frey competed in the G.L.L. and district meets along with upperclassmen Randy Burke, Jim Baumgartner, and Dana Barnett.

Close calls, narrow defeats give Whitmer a misleading record.

The Whitmer basketball season got off to a fine start with a victory over Woodward, but the next game, a loss to Sylvania, was unfortunately indicative of many future games. "Guts" and "execution" were the key terms stressed by Coach Mattimore as the team soundly defeated Ottawa Hills and continued Whitmer's eleven-year winning streak over Bedford. Plagued by injuries and sickness, the Panthers dishearteningly dropped the next eight games, although coming within one basket of victory against Clay and Port Clinton. An overtime against Bowling Green accounted for another narrow defeat for the Panthers. A second victory over Bedford was the last of the season as Whitmer fell victim to their remaining opponents. Despite this record, the Whitmer roundballers continued to work together as a team and in this manner achieved a form of success that does not come to all squads.

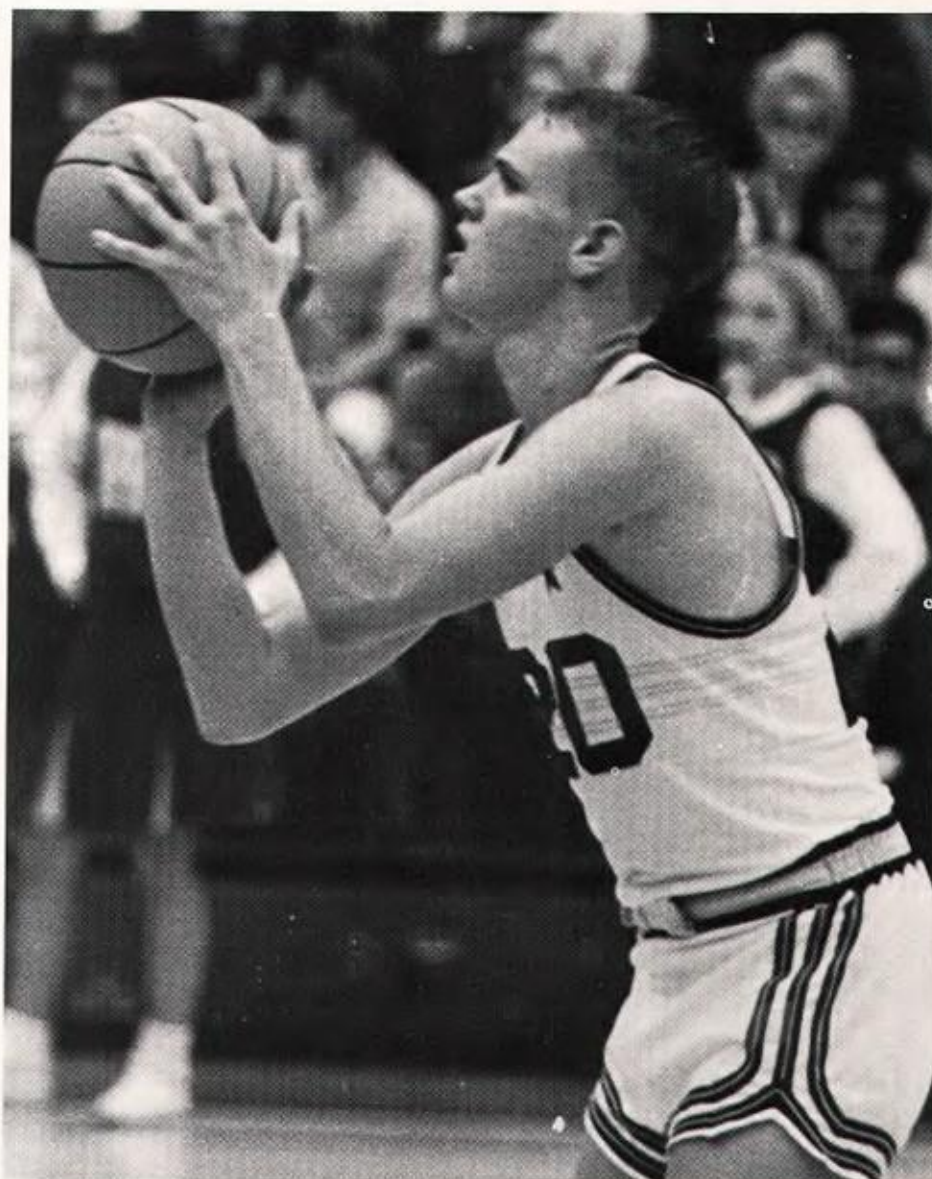

The reserve team, coached by Mr. Migliori, climaxed a successful season by capturing the Great Lakes League Championship. The overall reserve record was fourteen wins and four losses, while their league record was eleven wins and one loss.

Both the ninth and eighth grade buildings supported two teams. The ninth grade blue team, under the direction of Mr. Bahna, compiled a season record of four wins and six losses and a league record of two wins and four losses. Mr. Rice coached the maize team to season and league records of ten wins, two losses and six wins, two losses, respectively.

At the Jefferson building, Mr. Bartoo's blue team compiled a seven wins, one loss season record and won the first annual Bedford Invitational Tournament for eighth grade teams. The maize team, led by Mr. Schulz, marked a successful season with a record of five wins and three losses.

Wrestlers rank 3rd in GLL with two league champions.

Wrestling, one of the most grueling and rugged of all sports, requires high degrees of skill, control, and power, coupled with a drive to win. The Whitmer wrestlers practiced long hours until these traits became inherent in them. Under the guidance of their coach, Mr. Smith, the Panthers endured many rough meets and ended their dual meet season with a record of four wins and six losses. Whitmer took sixth place at its own annual Invitational Tournament during Christmas vacation. Although the team placed third, Rob Warren (165) and John Jacquot (heavy-weight) received top honors in their respective weight classes at the Great Lakes League Tournament. After placing third as a team in the sectional tournament, Whitmer was represented in the Northwest Ohio District tournament by Mark Brown (112), Jerry DeMoe (120), Rob Warren and John Jacquot.

Promising future varsity wrestlers competed for Whitmer as reserve wrestlers. Composed of both sophomore and junior wrestlers, the reserves gained in experience and technique by competing against teams from other schools. Under the guidance of their coach, Mr. Lattimore, the reserves compiled an overall record of seven wins and three losses.

The freshman wrestling team was divided into two squads. The maize squad was coached by Mr. Klomp and Mr. Cain coached the blue squad. Mr. Zientek was the eighth grade wrestling coach.

The Whitmer swim team had its most successful and first winning season this year when it accumulated a record of six wins and four losses. Following the adage "practice makes perfect," grueling workouts were held throughout the summer at various quarries and pools, while winter practice was held at the West Toledo YMCA from 6:45 to 8:00 on weekday mornings. Whitmer's home meets were held at the YWCA. The team members, under the direction of Coach Cicak, broke several old records and established new ones.

The varsity baseball team encountered some very formidable foes on the diamond this year, but managed to make a creditable showing. The Panthers were defeated by Rogers, Sylvania, and Blissfield in their first three appearances on the field. After a close win over Bowling Green, and a victory against the Polar Bears of Woodward, the Panthers again lost the next three games in a row.

Coach Alt's team, however, was able to rally for two consecutive shutouts over St. Francis and Bowling Green. Two losses to Fremont and Devilbiss were followed by a Panther victory over Clay. The Whitmer team finished out their season by falling victim to Fremont and Bedford. Glenn Durik and Dave Soldner were chosen for all Great Lakes League first team.

The reserves, under the coaching of Mr. Mattimore, finished up the season with a winning record of five wins and four losses.

Whitmer's golfers surprise opponents by capturing GLL.

The Whitmer golfers did not let Sylvania's victory in the opening match of the season stifle their potential. The next two losses, to Bowling Green and Ottawa Hills, were the last of the regular season as the Panthers swept the league by winning their final ten matches. Under the competent direction of their coach, Mr. Kingsley, Whitmer went on to capture the Great Lakes League championship, which was unexpected by the other league teams and thus a doublefold victory.

The Panthers avenged their loss to Sylvania by defeating the Wildcats in a close tournament match which was one of the team's most important victories. They then went on to further redeem themselves by defeating Rogers in tournament play which allowed Whitmer to advance to the Northwest Ohio District finals. The Panthers became district runner-up when Ottawa Hills again slipped by Whitmer with a margin of four strokes.

The Whitmer racquetmen completed their third and most successful season by capturing second place in the Great Lakes League. Under the coaching of Mr. Whiteman, the team compiled a league record of four wins and one loss. Although losing the season opener to Sylvania, the Panthers rebounded to defeat their next four opponents, shutting out both Waite and Fostoria. The loss of a close match to Bowsher did not phase Whitmer, as they went on to defeat Port Clinton in the next match by a sound margin. A loss to Ottawa Hills was followed by a league victory over Clay, although Rogers and Ottawa Hills defeated the Panthers in the closing matches of the season.

A large number of returning lettermen was an important factor in the team's success this season. Lettermen leading the singles team were Bill Paben and Mark Weinberg. The doubles team consisted of Mike Negrin-Steve Sanders and Neil Bornstein-Steve Sybert.

The strain of the match is reflected in his expression as Neil Doermann begins to deliver a tough serve.

Bruce Van Wey broke the record for the pole vault and placed first in the Northwest Ohio District. Greg Wojciechowski established the new school record in the shot put and a new record in the two-mile event was set by Kevin Barnett.

Having played a rough schedule, the team lost many of their dual matches but triumphed in a tri-school meet with Bedford and DeVilbiss at the end of the season. In his second year as track coach, Mr. Cline led the team to a third place ranking in the Great Lakes League.

Cheerleading squads from each of the three buildings helped develop the spirit and pride that Whitmer was founded on. Varsity cheerleaders were found at all home and away football and basketball games, served as runners at the Whitmer Invitational Wrestling Tournament, and were responsible for planning all pep sessions. They could also be found in the cafeteria after school making posters and, during Homecoming Week, selling mums throughout the school. Eighth and ninth grade cheerleaders and their advisers helped to make the underclassmen recognize the pride that will become an inherent part of them throughout their later years at Whitmer. The cheerleaders were led by their advisers Mrs. Karazim, for the varsity and reserve squads, Miss Kearney, for the ninth grade, and Miss Cartlidge for the eighth grade squads.

Team sportsmanship displayed through

The purpose of Varsity W is to unite the athletes of the school who have earned a varsity letter. Varsity W's members were an important part of the student body as they promoted spirit throughout the school and supported fellow athletes by attending most of the sports activities. Varsity W had a dance and all the money went toward the annual banquet at the end of the year.

The Whitmer Girls' Athletic Association encouraged girls to participate in intramurals in order to learn good teamwork and to make new friends. To test their skill and to develop sportsmanship, they contended in inter-scholastic competition after school. The girls must take part in at least one sport each season to maintain membership. Because this club was met with a large amount of enthusiasm, the girls split into class teams.

The Jefferson Girl's Athletic Association promoted leadership and good sportsmanship. Girls became better skilled in various sports including softball, basketball, and volleyball. Members made a Christmas basket as one of their service projects.

tags promote spirit among students.

School spirit is the goal of the Varsity and Reserve Pep clubs. Members promoted spirit by painting signs and hanging them up in the cafeteria. Everyday during football season these girls spent many after school hours painting victory signs. The night before a game or match the members made locker tags for the Panther sportsmen. These tags were in the shape of the opposing team's mascot and they displayed the saying for the game.

The Washington Pep Club members backed the school teams by attending as many games as possible. This club sponsored a Thanksgiving dance. All proceeds were used for their many service projects throughout the year.

Various programs and film strips on health careers were shown by the Paramedical Club. Projects for this year included a Thanksgiving basket for a needy family, a caroling party and a visit to the medical center at the University of Michigan. This club is open to any student who expresses an interest or desire in a medical or health career.

Distributive Education students are eligible to join the Distributive Education Club of America. The club's purpose is to promote interest in business and industry and to develop future leaders for marketing and distribution. Activities for the year included competing in district, state, and national D.E.C.A. contests.

This year the Future Teachers of America Club has expanded its activities. Throughout the year F.T.A. members taught at different grade schools such as Monac, MacGregor, Meadowvale, and so forth in the Whitmer district. Another innovation in the club was the chance for members to gain experience in the teaching profession by being teachers' aids and observing in the classroom.

The Future Homemakers of America Club is open to all those taking home economics. Meetings were held to discuss the problems of the homemaker and the improvements a person could make. At Christmas time there was a party held for all the members at the home of the adviser. In January the club held a party for a group of orphans.

To have taken one business course is the only qualification for membership to the Future Business Leaders of America Club. Focusing on business, F.B.L.A. members participated in district, state, and national contests. The areas in which they competed were bookkeeping, spelling, and typing. F.B.L.A. has meetings once a month and usually has a guest speaker who comes from some phase of the business world.

VICA and BOE prepare students for Better Office Employees was a new business club which consisted of both juniors and seniors who participated in one of the three block programs, account/bookkeeping, clerk/typist, or stenographers. Activities for the year included a picnic at Pearson Park, selling Tom-Wat articles to raise money, and a banquet at the end of the year.

Leadership, training, prestige and recognition are some of the ideas taught to Vocational Industrial Clubs of America members. This new club is made up of students who are enrolled in a two year vocational program. Members were prepared for the many industrial and technical careers that would be waiting for them upon graduation. Two bake sales were sponsored so members could give baskets of food to needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas. Dan Gonzalez, a student in Cosmetology, represented Whitmer as State Vice President in the club. In the spring a styling contest was held and three students were picked to represent our school in the Spring Conference in Columbus.

The Equestrians Club included students from all three buildings who rode once a week for two hours at Howard Stables. The members gained knowledge in the care and training of horses and in the skill of riding and jumping. The Equestrians put on a horse show at Howard Stables which demonstrated the skill and showmanship which they had acquired throughout the year.

Members of the Photography Club met to discuss and learn the techniques of good picture taking. As the year progressed and the members became skilled, time was spent in discussing improvements each person could make. The only qualification for membership was that a student be a ninth grader.

The Campus Life Youth for Christ Club is designed for student participation through provocative discussions of contemporary problems. The club enables one to become a better person by combining an unusual assortment of fun with a unique approach to balanced living.

The purpose of Y-Teens is to unite its members in the spirit of friendliness and service. The members addressed cards and envelopes for the Tuberculosis Society, collected glasses and lenses for "Eyes for the Needy," and had an Everybody's Birthday Party for one of the orphanages around town. Besides all these service projects, they also had many fun projects throughout the year.

Councils plan imaginative projects to

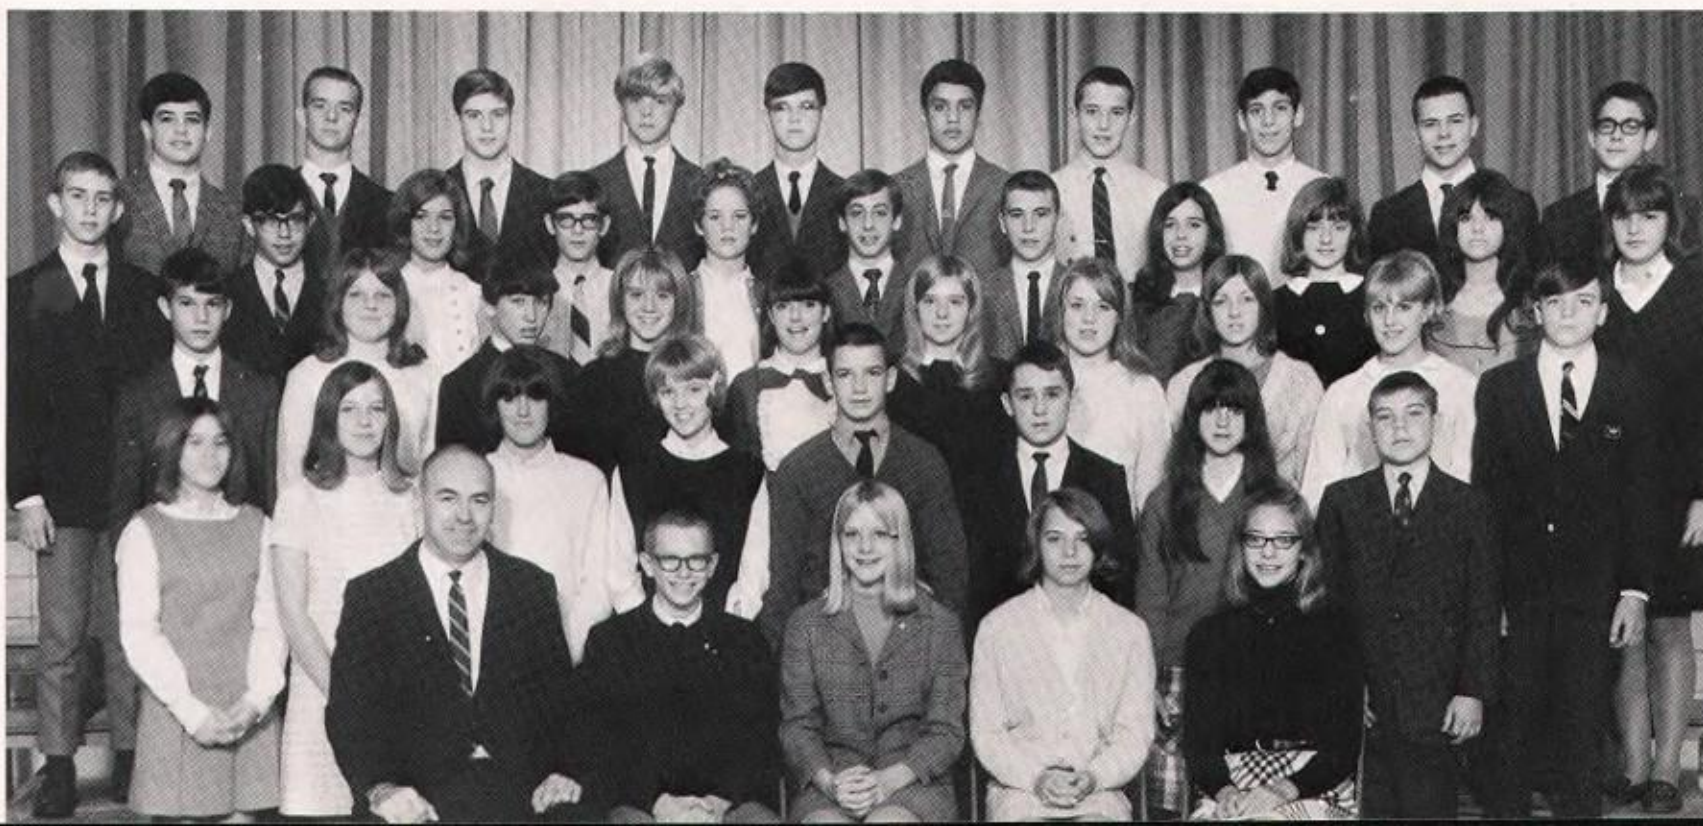

This year the eighth grade added a communications chairman to inform students of the projects of council. One of their projects was a pep week which included the decoration of the halls. They also sponsored a Christmas and Valentine's Day dance.

The ninth-grade council sponsored the orphan from France and a Halloween dance. They also worked with the other student councils to raise the money needed to build a school overseas by selling paper bricks representing the bricks of the school.

The main goal of Whitmer's Student Council was to give interested students the opportunity to be involved in its projects. This goal, along with those stated in the constitution, was met by various projects throughout the year. There were several new projects, for example, a pre-game poster party, a carnation Valentine's Day, and a computer dance with Sylvania. Council also sponsored the Thanksgiving assembly dedicated to remembering the little things.

The National Forensic League honored interscholastic speech students who received points for outstanding performances at speech tournaments. A student could receive up to twenty-five N.F.L. points for a high class standing. There were about fifty tournaments from October through March which the students attended.

Debate and individual events members, many of which are members of the Forum Club, had the opportunity to demonstrate their speaking skills at tournaments throughout the year. Debaters spent many nights preparing their notes, reviewing cases with their coach, and keeping up on current events by reading magazines and newspapers. Members of the individual events team competed in different categories including boys' and girls' extemporaneous speaking, humorous, dramatic, and oratorical declamation, and original oratory.

Versatile members express artistic

Members of the Freshmen Drama Club attended productions at local theatres. A parody of Charles Dickens', "A Christmas Carol," was presented by members to the student body in the annual Christmas program. Students must have a C average or better and a sincere interest in theater work to join the club.

Students who showed interest and had artistic ability were qualified to join the Art Club whose purpose was to promote an interest in art. The members bought more equipment and paintings, had an art show, and took trips to the Toledo Art Museum to hear speeches.

Nancy Silverthorne, Debbie Kear, Sue Sowers, and Sue Gibson are majorettes for the Whitmer Panther Marching Band.

A chicken barbecue, apples, calisthenics, after-the-game parties, jogging, sugar daddies, skull-sessions and the annual trip to the University of Michigan to observe the Wolverine Marching Band, were some of the activities of the 1968-69 Marching Band members. Two weeks before school started anyone driving by the school could see a huge cloud of dust hovering over the practice field behind Washington. The dust was kicked up as the band diligently practiced their various drill routines and halftime shows that they performed at pre-game and halftime throughout the football season. The evenings were concluded by post-game activities in which the band played a few numbers in block formation. The annual band night was held the first home game against St. Francis, with an excellent performance by the eighth and ninth grade bandmen. The theme of the show was "A Salute to George M. Cohan" the original "song and dance man." This was also the first night that sophomore Jim McVickers appeared as assistant drum major in preparation to follow in Randy Scott's footsteps as head drum major next year.

Members of the Symphonic Band busily prepared for a crowded schedule. A Christmas concert held with the Whitmer Choir was the first main event of the year. After Christmas, a vast number of members could be seen practicing solos or ensembles for the State Solo and Ensemble Contest held at Bowling Green. As hoped, the bandsmen made a great showing and came away with many superior and excellent ratings.

and social events during the year.

Varsity bandsmen returned to school prepared to begin their busy schedule. In January, members held a concert with the opening music being composed by Mr. Dental especially for this type of an affair. Long hours were spent on memorization of music for the State Solo and Ensemble Contest. Many school assemblies and meetings provided the band with a chance to perform in front of the student body.

Members of the Washington Concert Band displayed their excellent musical ability by competing in the O.M.E.A. Junior High Band Contest. The District Solo Ensemble Contest provided a tremendous challenge for many music students. The band also gave a concert and played for many of the school functions.

The Jefferson Concert Band performed before the student body in the Thanksgiving Day assembly, playing selections that pertained to Thanksgiving and the autumn season. Members were also kept busy practicing for two concerts and the annual Ice Cream Social which were all open to the public.

Mr. Clyde Brown, Director, accompanies the choir on the piano during a class rehearsal.

Members of the Whitmer Choir showed their talents and excellent singing ability by giving various concerts for the public throughout the year. The main event of the year was "A Festival of Carols" in which the Symphonic band also took part. There were many vocal solos and an ensemble that added a special touch to many of the well-known Christmas carols. Whitmer was also well represented by many talented Choir members in the State Solo and Ensemble Contest, held at Bowling Green University on March 1. After a tense, fun, and excited day, participants brought home a large number of superior and excellent ratings.

The Freshman Choir sang for the Student Council inductions and also for the Thanksgiving assembly. The choir visited area grade schools and performed for them. Many of the members sang in the Hi-Jinx, Washington's annual stage production. The choir participated in the North Western District 100 which was held at Waite. In this, there is competition from schools all over Northwestern Ohio. The choir had two concerts in the spring, one of which was a pop concert which only featured popular music. They also sang for the Easter assembly.

at all their concerts and festivals.

The Eighth Grade Choir furthered the interest in mixed vocal music. Students who participated had an interest and desire in singing. Members sang in the assemblies presented at Christmas, Thanksgiving, and Easter. They also toured the grade schools and presented a colorful program to the students. This choir also displayed their vocal talents in a pop concert.

to explore French customs and ideas.

Students who have taken or are taking French are eligible for membership in the French Club. The club's purpose is to promote interest in the French people and language, and provide students with a better understanding of the French culture. The Whitmer Club took a field trip to Detroit and had a French banquet. With the money they earned from several money-making projects, they bought supplies for the French department. For another project they donated canned goods to be used by the student council. Members of Washington's club formed a French Choir and went caroling at Christmas. They also presented a Christmas program. Members planned a style show which was presented completely in French.

attract new members to Spanish clubs.

The requirement for Spanish Club, which tries to create an interest in the Spanish language and culture, is to have taken or to be taking one year of Spanish. Members in the Whitmer club held a car wash in the fall to add to their treasury. In October, an initiation picnic was held at Ottawa Park. A Latin-American atmosphere was created at the induction ceremony for new members, when authentic Mexican food was served and sampled by many for the first time. In December, a Christmas basket was prepared for a needy family. Later in the year, students went to the Toledo Museum of Art to view paintings by Spanish artists.

A bake sale started off the year at Washington to earn funds to buy Spanish Club pins. Members sponsored a bonfire in late fall.

At Jefferson, skits were presented at most of the meetings during the year. Students went to a Spanish Restaurant, La Molinda, several times this year. When the Christmas season came, the annual display at the Toledo Zoo, Christmas Around the World, was visited by the club.

for membership in school honoraries.

Quill and Scroll is a literary honorary for members of the Panther's Pause and Oracle staffs. To be eligible for membership, a student must do exceptional work on his respective staff, be in the top third of his class and have the recommendation of his adviser. Members were inducted at a formal dinner.

High achievement in Spanish is recognized at Whitmer by the Cervantes Chapter of the Spanish Honorary. To qualify for induction, students must have had an A average in Spanish for three semesters. Members attended the annual Spanish Honorary Convention in Columbus, fourth year students put out a Spanish newspaper, and the outstanding senior Spanish student was given an award.

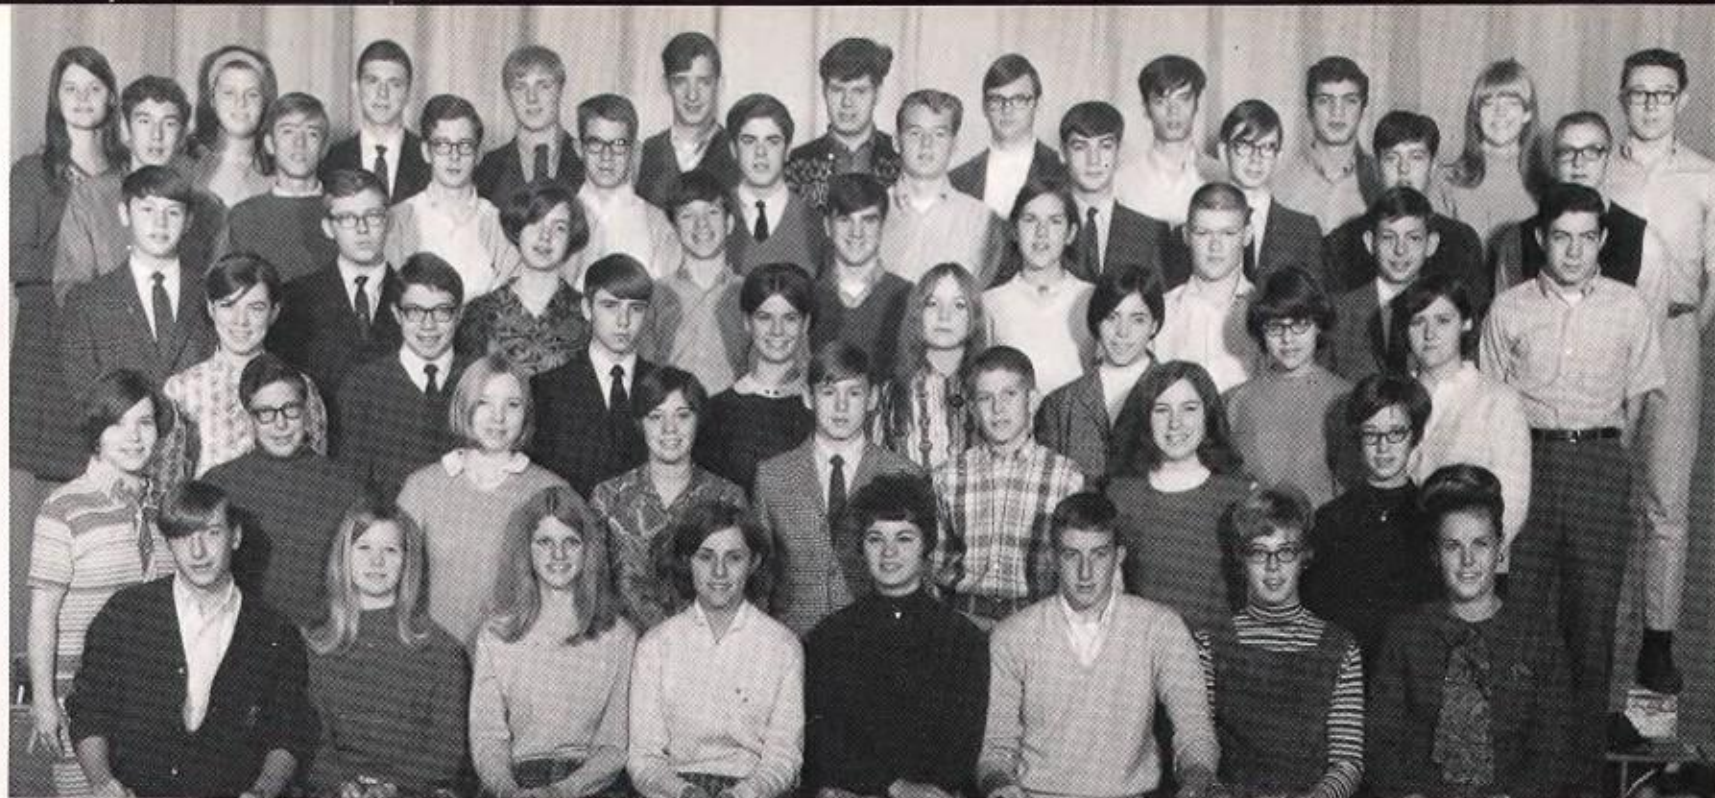

A new club, French Honorary, was formed to give interested students a chance to learn aspects of France's culture outside the classroom. A formal induction was held at the home of the adviser, and then meetings were held once a month with a featured event or speaker. For Christmas the members sang carols at the homes of previous French teachers.

The requirement for membership in Classical Honor Society is to have had one semester of Latin with at least a C average. The annual slave sale was the highlight of the year when new members were sold to old members. Baskets were distributed to needy families at Thanksgiving and Christmas. A Saturnalia party was held at Christmas time, and in the spring a Roman banquet was held.

Foreign customs intrigue members.

The German Club, under the direction of their new adviser, Miss Stone, worked to understand the language and customs practiced in Germany, and once a month showed a German movie. In celebration of Oktoberfest, a sixteen day carnival celebration of fall, members sold pretzels and ginger beer at one of the football games. Members also traveled to Frankenmuth, a small German town in Michigan, to acquaint themselves with the German way of life.

Latin Club members began the year by celebrating

Virgil's birthday on October 15. Virgil was honored as the greatest Roman poet and his masterpiece, the Aeneid, was read through the centuries when most literary works were ignored. Time was taken by members in mid-December to observe Saturnalia, which originated as a harvest festival celebrated by the ancient Romans and is similar to Christmas. At their meetings during the year, students were encouraged to explore the Latin language to provide them with a fuller understanding of the Roman culture.

Chess requires concentration skills.

This year's Whitmer Chess Team was defending champion of the Ohio, Michigan, and Indiana Region Five Tournament. The winning team consisted of Art Lerner and Gary Loar who rated first in the junior division. Dave Perlmutter was the runner-up in the unrated division and Ed Weiland won first place in the sixteen year old division. Whitmer's chess team attended and won many other tournaments, among which were the 1967 Detroit Motor City Championship, the 1968 Robert W. Beach Memorial and the 1967-68 Greater Toledo Area Chess League Championship.

Anyone who is interested in chess is eligible to join the Washington Chess Club, the main objective being to gain skill in playing chess. The members reached this objective by meeting once a week and practicing moves and strategy. This practice helped to prepare them for next year's matches at the Whitmer building.

Visits to the library help Jefferson student, Beckie Roberts, obtain reading material to assist in her studies.

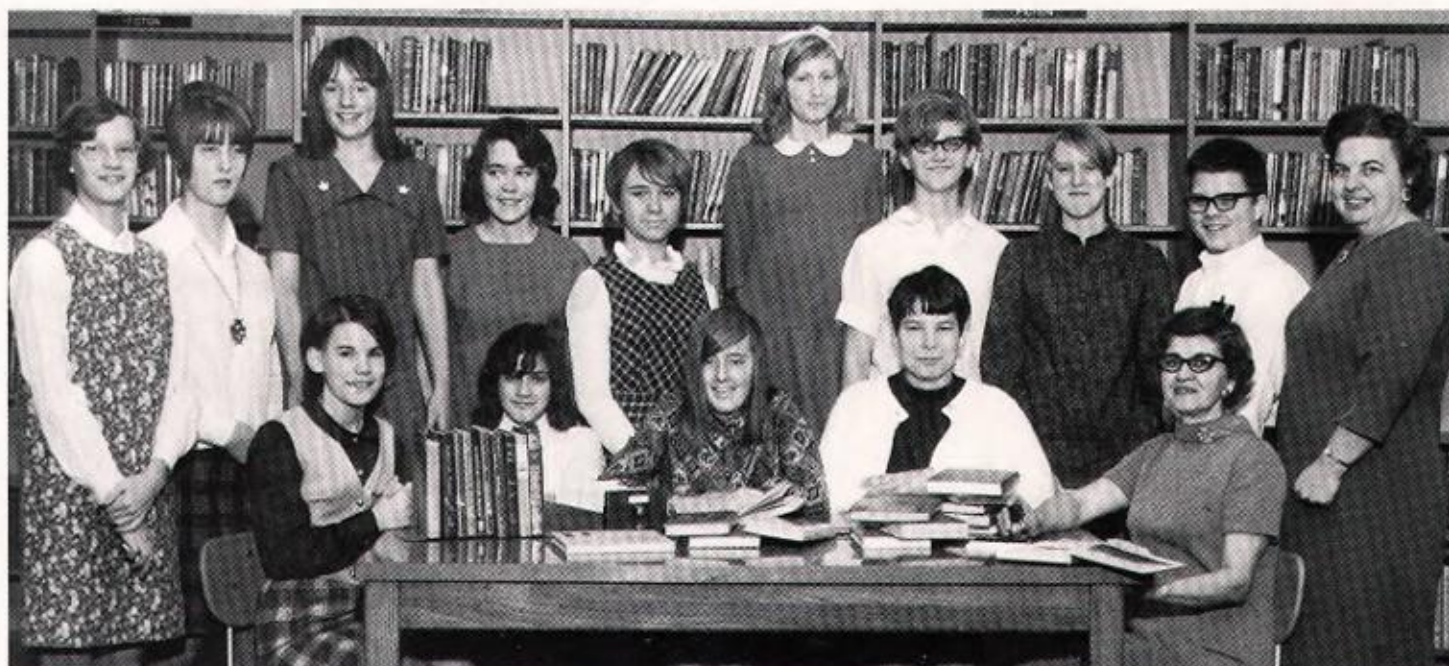

By shelving books and filing cards,

Members of the library council in all three buildings worked together to promote greater interest among the students in the use of the library. They also volunteered their own free time to work in the library and assist the librarians in the many daily tasks. Membership is open to any interested student whose grade average is C or above and who has a reputation for good citizenship. The Washington library council sponsored a secondhand book sale to raise money to send books to foreign countries for Christmas through CARE. The annual Valentine baked goods sale and a field trip to the downtown library were part of Jefferson's council activities for the year. The Whitmer library council took over the concession stand at one of the basketball games and published a library magazine dealing with new books and poems.

understanding of worldly affairs.

The Junior Council on World Affairs promoted a better understanding of the world today among the youth of the nation. One of their activities this year was co-sponsoring the mock election. This club helped to illustrate the most important privilege adults have in this country, voting for the best candidate.

The American Field Service raised money to bring foreign exchange students, Anne Bordier from France and Richard Blow from England, to Whitmer. A.F.S. had a bake sale, put on a movie, held a rummage sale with the help of the adult chapter, and also had a tobogganing party over Christmas vacation.

The goal of the National Honor Society was to bring about by example an enthusiasm for scholarship, service, worthy leadership and the development of character. Seniors were inducted in December at an assembly and later inducted formally at a progressive dinner. Juniors inducted in the spring attended a formal banquet. The members served as guides at open house and speech tournaments. They also held projects to raise money for the scholarship fund.

Biweekly edition of Panther's Pause

Staff members Mike Beakas, Viv Katz, and Sue Bubenko discuss a new idea for a feature story in the next issue of the Panther's Pause.

An increase in the size of the Panther's Pause, new ideas from the staff, and better information kept students from all three buildings well-informed of school activities throughout the year. Members of the staff were kept busy by their biweekly deadlines. Encouraged by a first class rating last year, students spent many hours working during unscheduled time and after school hoping to do as well this year and to even better the publication.

A record number of subscriptions were sold during a subscription drive launched in September. Sale of the extra large Christmas supplement in December and the senior's Last Will and Testament in the spring contributed to a successful year. Because of the staggered schedules of students, papers were sold in homeroom. The price of the paper was raised due to an increase in the cost of publication.

A new position was created this year. The new business manager handled all business transactions. She was in charge of sales of the paper and supplements. Ads from various places of business were under her direction. During the summer juniors as well as seniors canvassed the Whitmer area for ads to help with publishing costs. Besides a new business manager, the Panther's Pause also had a new room location.

Journalism I students assisted the staff members by gathering news information to help meet deadlines. They also helped sell the newspapers during homeroom. To prepare juniors for next year when they will be publishing the paper by themselves, a junior issue was done exclusively by them.

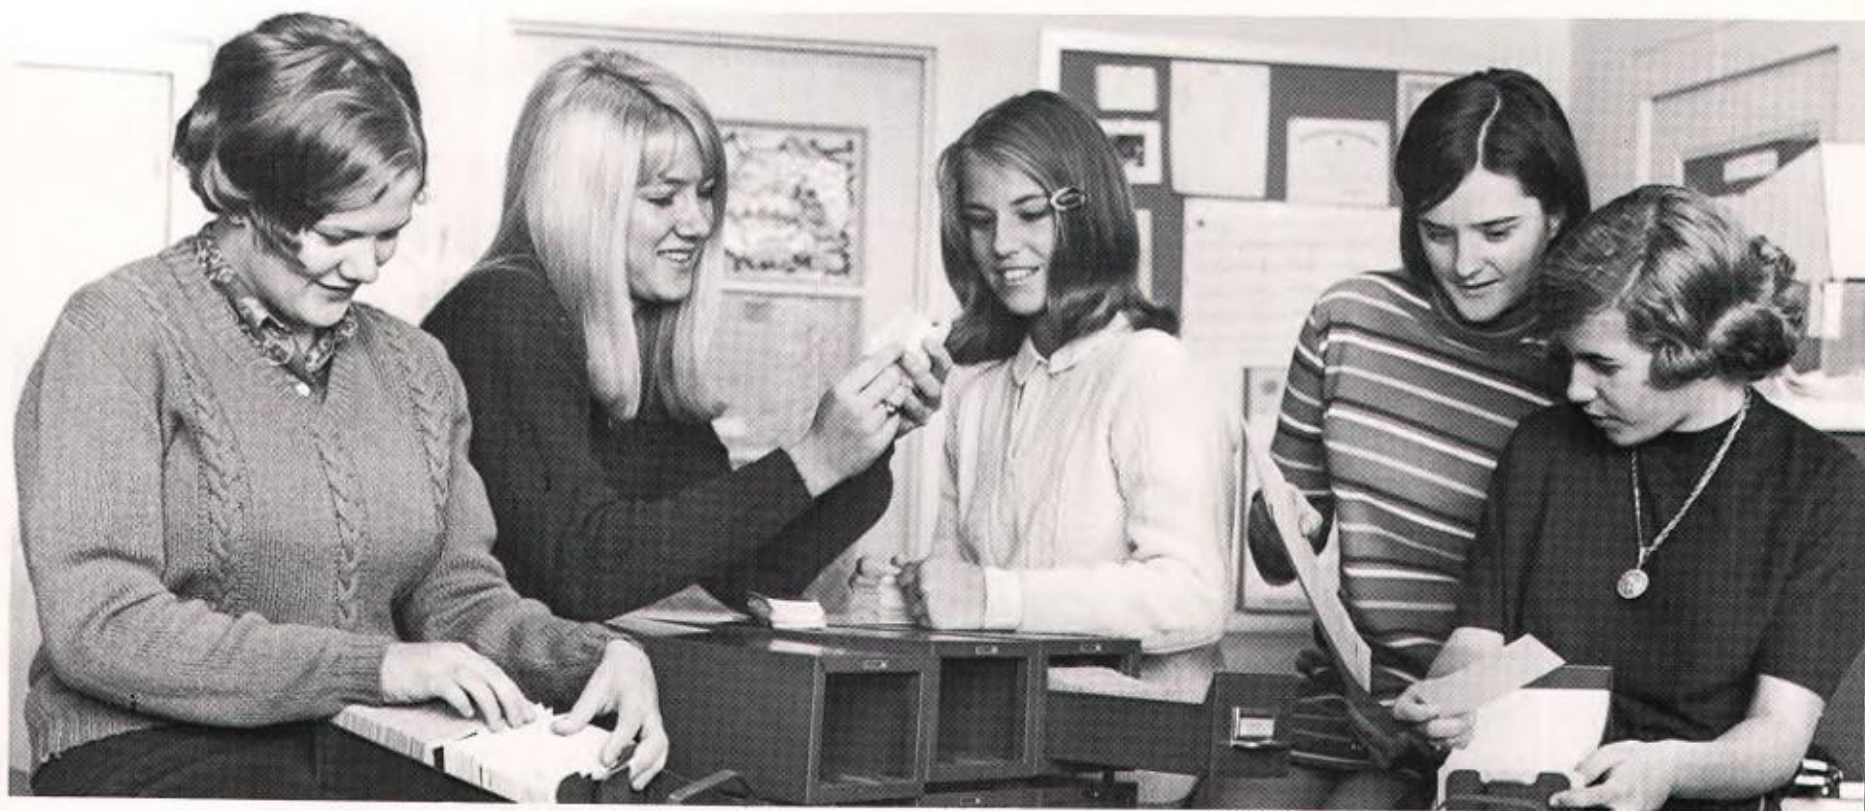

Liz Kirby and Jan DeGood run off the first page of the Christmas supplement as Denise DeBoer draws the next page on a stencil.

Distribution climaxes long hours put

The Oracle staff, along with its new adviser, Mrs. Norton, worked many long hours to complete a yearbook that would meet the high standards of past Whitmer books. People working on each section of the book combined skills they had learned with fresh ideas to make that section as creative as possible. The book was enlarged this year to include students and activities from the Jefferson and Washington buildings. The extra additions created an even busier schedule of picture taking, identifying, classifying, alphabetizing, caption and copy writing, interviewing, designing layouts, and keeping up with school events. Besides literally putting the book together page by page, staffers sold advertisements during summer vacation, campaigned for book sales, and spent free time, lunch hours, and after school doing extra work and running errands.

With the last deadline sent in March, staff members caught up on book work and started making preparations for next year's Oracle and staff. Then the yearbooks arrived in May and the final product of many hours of work was ready for distribution.

Mrs. Eileen Claspill

A 1938 graduate of the University of Toledo, Mrs. Eileen Claspill began her teaching career at Walbridge School. She then came to the Washington Local School System where she spent 17 years. She was assigned to the Washington building of the Whitmer Complex. Nationally known for junior high level math instruction, Mrs. Claspill was the author of numerous articles in nation wide mathematics publications. Her students consistently took top honors in district and state mathematics competition. She was also a member of various organizations and honorary societies. Mrs. Claspill passed away December 6, 1968, after undergoing heart surgery several weeks before.

In Memoriam

Mrs. Vivian Bertram

In 1934, after graduation from the University of Toledo, Mrs. Vivian Bertram came to Whitmer to start her teaching career. The subject matter was mathematics but students who came to know her learned more than math. To many she was a close friend, someone to rely and depend on, someone to love and respect. Throughout 34 faithful years, her responsibilities also extended outside the classroom. She was department head for seven years, adviser to numerous clubs and organizations, and co-sponsor of Whitmer's first girls' bowling team. On November 5, 1968, Mrs. Bertram passed away after a long illness. She will long be remembered by Whitmer High School students and her colleagues as a credit to the teaching profession.

Literally jumping for joy, varsity cheerleaders spiritedly commend the Panther roundballers on a two point acquisition.

Due to area wide knowledge of Whitmer pride, the loyal opposition upholds signs to break the Panther morale.

Realizing the closeness of an Oracle deadline, Cheryl Feldkamp arranges a 3R for typing.

Carolyn Knisely, being Student Council showcase chairman, wipes away smudges and fingerprints...

"I didn't know that!"

Larry Buettner casually reads a news article in his WOW class at Jefferson.

...so the message will be unobstructed.

Mr. Bahna ponders over recently given test scores.

"What do you mean, where does it go?"

Debby Williams hungrily looks at the FTA bakesale goodies while awaiting more customers.

Bill Squier really goes off the deep end this time.

Lane Feaver's motto is, "I'll huff and I'll puff..."

Jeff Jablonski intently works on part of an experiment dealing with trains and magnetism.

We, the 1969 Oracle staff, would like to take this opportunity to thank those people who helped make this yearbook possible. Special appreciation is in order to the administration, faculty, and students, especially Mrs. Norton and Mrs. Towe, Mr. Bob Abraham of H.A. Powell Studios, and Bob Blanton from the American Yearbook Company.
